35,815 ROARING FANS SEE CARDS WIN AND EVEN UP WORLD SERIES

Comeback Over Red Sox
Brings Big Ovation —
Ted Williams Boomed
Each Time He Goes to Plate.

By SELWYN PEPPER
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, Oct. 7—An elated, roaring crowd of 35,815 Cardinals fans watched the hard-fighting St. Louis team defeat the Boston Red Sox this afternoon in the second World Series game. The series is now tied with both teams having a single victory each. A tremendous cheer burst from the rosters when the Red Sox retired in the ninth inning, still scoreless.

Despite yesterday's defeat and the caddy professional odds favoring the Sox, unimpressed Cardinal supporters, who bought every seat in the ball park hours before the start of today's game, smelled victory in the air when Boston's heaviest hitters were successfully controlled, inning after inning.

After the game, blue-uniformed ushers took positions all around the infield to stop fans from cutting across the field to the Grand boulevard exit. It appeared more likely that the Cardinals and Sox would be returning here for a sixth and possibly a seventh game and the groundskeepers wanted to be sure the field was in shape.

The crowd was slow in leaving. Many fans formed clusters on the field to discuss the game and the Cardinal chances of winning the series. The Southwest appeared to have a heavy representation, with many of the departing fans wearing pearl gray 10-gallon hats.

Fans booed lustily every time Ted Williams came to the plate. In the sixth inning, he swung hard and missed, and his bat flew all the way into the Sox dugout. Grandstand patrons gasped, then booed again. When Williams lined out, fans cheered the catch and again booed Williams as he entered the dugout.

In the last half of the fifth inning, when the Cardinals increased their lead to 3 to 0, spectators went wild with excitement. They rang cowbells, clapped in unison to rattle the visitors' pitcher, groaned whenever a Cardinal missed a strike and noted with satisfaction that Boston was warming up a relief pitcher.

Two small boys, inside the park but unable to see because of the crush of spectators, contented themselves with their own game of cork ball near a grandstand entrance.

Many with standing room tickets found themselves marooned near a hotdog stand, unable to move.

Listened on Radios.
They listened to the remainder of the game on radios. Some policemen and firemen, assigned to keep order in the crowd, also listened to the game on radios. A woman attending the switchboard in the Cardinal office could hear the crowd cheer, but had to listen to a radio to find out what was going on.

Both today and yesterday fans were entertained before the games.

BETTING ODDS ON SERIES 3 1/2 TO 1 AGAINST CARDS AFTER FIRST GAME LOSS

BETTING odds on the World Series today stood at 3 1/2 to 1 for bets placed on the Cardinals and 1 to 5 for bets placed on the Boston Red Sox, it was reported by James J. Carroll, East St. Louis betting commissioner.

This means that a $1 bet placed on the Cardinals would pay $3.50, while a $5 bet on the Red Sox would pay only $1.

These odds were for the whole series, quoted after the Cardinals had dropped the first game yesterday. For today's game, Carroll was quoting odds of 7 to 10 to those placing bets on the Red Sox and 6 to 5 to those placing bets on the Cardinals.

MAN DIES AFTER BEING KICKED BY HORSE ON FARM

Herbert J. Green, Kehrs Mill road, Chesterfield, owner of the Club Restaurant in Clayton, died at St. Louis County Hospital today after being kicked by a horse at the Donald L. Barnes farm, Chesterfield.

The horse belonged to Wilson Condict, 7238 Carondelet avenue, Clayton. Condict's nephew, Barton White, who lives with him, and two of White's companions were attempting to mount the horse when Green came after his own horse at the Barnes farm.

White said Green volunteered to help subdue the unruly Condict horse, fell down and was kicked by the animal's front hoofs. Green suffered a fractured skull and chest injuries.

He was treated by a physician, then taken to the county hospital. Green is survived by his wife and a 14-year-old daughter.

HULL CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

Navy Announces "Gradual, Definite Improvement" in Condition at 4 p.m.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Cordell Hull improved today after passing the point of immediate danger in his illness, Bethesda Naval Hospital reported.

Hull, who is 75 years old and suffered a stroke a week ago, "is continuing to show gradual but definite improvement," a 4 p.m. announcement said.

One of Biggest Meteor Showers In History Expected This Week

A series of watch parties will begin tomorrow night for scientists and amateur astronomers hoping to observe "one of the largest meteor showers in astronomical history."

Thousands of shooting stars will streak across the sky for three nights, with the peak coming Wednesday night, if the Giacobinid meteors meet expectations. The shower will radiate from the northwest, and astronomers are hoping skies will be clear and the nearly full moon in the southeast will not cause too much interference with the view.

Edwin E. Friton, regional director for the American Meteor Society, has arranged for more than 65 observers in St. Louis, other parts of Missouri and Southern Illinois to make a count of meteors observed to aid scientific study.

'Looks as if We Had All the Irish Here,' He Says at Sight of Wel- coming Party.

The Most Rev. Joseph Elmer Ritter, fourth Archbishop of St. Louis, arrived in St. Louis at 1:35 o'clock this afternoon and was driven from Union Station to St. Louis Cathedral, where he knelt in prayer before the tomb of his predecessor, Cardinal John Joseph Glennon, in All Souls' Chapel. He then went to the archiepiscopal residence, 4510 Lindell boulevard.

In his stay of a few minutes at the station, Archbishop Ritter received the greetings of clergy and laymen of the St. Louis archdiocese, and the official welcome of Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann. He exchanged pleasantries with the Mayor about the current world series, and remarked facetiously, as he surveyed the group: "It looks as if we had all the Irish here."

The slowness of his physical figure contrasted with the bulk of Auxiliary Bishop George J. Donnelly, who, with three Monsignori, had boarded his train at Granite City. The train was an hour and 35 minutes late in arriving.

Mayor Among Welcomers.
Magr. James P. Murray, director of diocesan schools, was the first of the waiting clerical group to kiss the Archbishop's ring. Mayor Kaufmann, who was accompanied by Charles J. Riley, Director of Public Safety, then extended his welcome.

Thanking him, the prelate said: "Too bad I had to come at such a busy time. I understand the Cardinals have won many pennants in the past." The Mayor replied: "I hope you can see one of the series games, and I think I can assure you that you will have the chance."

The line of automobiles escorting Archbishop Ritter moved from the station out Market street to Twentieth street, over Twentieth to Olive street and out Lindell boulevard.

At the cathedral, pupils of the cathedral grade school were lined on the sidewalk, while across Newstead avenue the girls of Rosati-Kahn High School were in front of that institution. As the archbishop's automobile stopped before the cathedral, a grade school pupil, Leroy Austin Rhodes of 3968 Laclede avenue, presented a bouquet to him.

'AMERICAN ACTION' SECRETLY FIGHTS CONGRESS 'LEFTS'; HEAVILY FINANCED

Movement Sponsored by Wealthy Men and Aimed at 'Reds' and PAC Claims G.O.P. and Anti-New Deal Support.

By EDWARD A. HARRIS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7—A political organization with heavy financial backing has been working under cover to purge Congress of what it calls "left wing radicals" and to nullify the efforts of the CIO Political Action Committee.

Called American Action, Inc., with headquarters in Chicago, it is disclosed in documents obtained by the Post-Dispatch to be on the order of ultra-nationalistic groups such as the old Liberty League and America First.

One of its sponsors is Robert E. Wood, board chairman of Sears Roebuck & Co., Chicago, formerly prominent in America First. The names of other wealthy and influential men are mentioned as policy-makers and large-scale contributors to a war chest which is said to exceed $750,000.

The plan is to spend this money in key congressional districts, including districts of Missouri and Illinois, where results are in doubt and where a little extra pressure may tip the balance in the November elections. A list of the key districts was not available.

A confidential letter from Wood states that "the movement has been discussed with and has the blessing of the topmost Republican and constitutional Democratic leaders in both houses of Congress."

Now that existence of the organization has been disclosed, there are likely to be demands for congressional investigation of its expenditures.

As explained in a pamphlet sent to an inner-circle group, the organization is to "defeat the CIO-PAC and Communist attempt to capture and control Congress."

"Party labels make no difference to them," the pamphlet continues. "What they are determined to get is a Congress that will do their bidding—a leftist Congress. With such a Congress they can and will make over and take over this republic."

A gloomy picture is painted of what, in the opinion of American Action, will befall the nation if an "organized minority can hoodwink, cajole, mislead, promise and drive enough voters to elect a Congress with a working majority of leftist Democrats, leftist Republicans, leftist liberals and leftist fusion candidates."

In that event, proclaims American Action, "You and your children will not only be on the road to serfdom, you will be at the very gates of servitude, for life, and you will be forced to enter against your will. This proud, free republic, which you inherited, or to which you came for refuge, will be made over, and you will become just a subject of another Socialist-Communist state."

Declaring that "American Action is for America and against its enemies," the pamphlet asserts "this is a partisan citizens' movement is incorporated for political action against radicalism, against Communism and against the CIO-PAC."

LANDLORDS' GROUP PICKS CANDIDATES; SLATE A SECRET

Acutely conscious of the tenant's reaction to anything done by the landlord, the Real Property Owners' League is not disclosing its endorsement of political candidates for the November elections until the individual candidates give approval.

Elmer L. Schmedel, league president, said: "There are at least 10 tenants to every one landlord and we, as a minority group, do not feel we should announce our support of a candidate unless he wants it."

Schmedel wanted it made clear, however, that no apology was being offered for the candidates' slate, adopted yesterday at a meeting of 300 small property owners at the Melbourne Hotel.

"We believe in the principle of Thomas Jefferson that he who is least governed is best governed," Schmedel said. "Candidates who seem most likely to support that principle and who stand for the freedom for which the veterans fought were endorsed."

GREEN SAYS AFL UNIONS WILL SEEK WELFARE FUNDS LIKE UMW'S

Urges End of Wage, Price Controls, Except on Rent and Some Items—
Schwellenbach Not on Speakers' List.

CHICAGO, Oct. (AP)—AFL President William Green today called for wage increases for American workers as industry's productivity improves and said all AFL unions will seek to establish welfare funds similar to that recently won by John L. Lewis's mine workers.

In an address opening the AFL's sixty-fifth annual convention, Green called also for an end of all Government wage and price controls, "except rent ceilings and some other items comparable to that."

"I am confident," Green said, "that this convention will express the resentment of the American Federation of Labor against continued government control over our economic life."

The AFL leader's keynote convention speech praised the "successful fight" conducted by Lewis to win a welfare fund for the AFL United Mine Workers' union. The fund was granted by Government contract with the miners after the White House seized the mines to stop a long strike this spring. The fund is financed by a 5-cent coal levy paid by mine owners on all coal produced.

Green said Lewis had established a principle in setting up such systems to provide money for health and other social security for workers and AFL unions consider Lewis's fund as an "objective" to work for.

Out of the war has come extremely more efficient methods of production, Green asserted, adding that AFL workers intend to share by higher wages in the fruits of that productivity.

The convention opened with the name of Secretary of Labor Schwelbenbach absent from the speakers' list. The omission, which AFL leaders said could be taken as a mild slap at Schwelbenbach, was coupled with a reference in an AFL executive council report expressing displeasure with Department of Labor policies.

Traditionally the Secretary of Labor speaks at conventions of the AFL.

"The executive council expresses keen disappointment over developments in the administration of labor matters by the Department of Labor," the council report said.

This comment referred particularly to Government reorganization moves which have transferred various functions from the Department of Labor to other agencies, transfers the council deplored.

Opposes 'Disembodiment.'
"The split in the labor movement," the council said, "has been used as an excuse for selecting a secretary who is not of labor but it cannot be invoked to condone the disembodiment of the department instead of its expansion."

Asked whether omission of

OPA CAN'T FIGURE COST OF RECENT PRICE INCREASES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—OPA said today it has no ready estimate of how much recent price increases will cost the public.

An OPA statistical expert shuddered at a reporter's question prompted by this sentence in Reconstruction Director John R. Steelman's quarterly report last week: "Prices have already risen further in the three months since the original Price Control Act expired than they did in the previous 38 months."

"There have been thousands of increases," the OPA statistician said. "It would be very difficult to estimate the total."

The agency has emphasized that most of the price boosts it has announced resulted from terms of the new Price Control Act Congress passed after the original OPA statute expired June 30.

Price Administrator Paul Porter says that in the peak war period there were between 100,000 and 1,000,000 items under price control, depending on how you figure it.

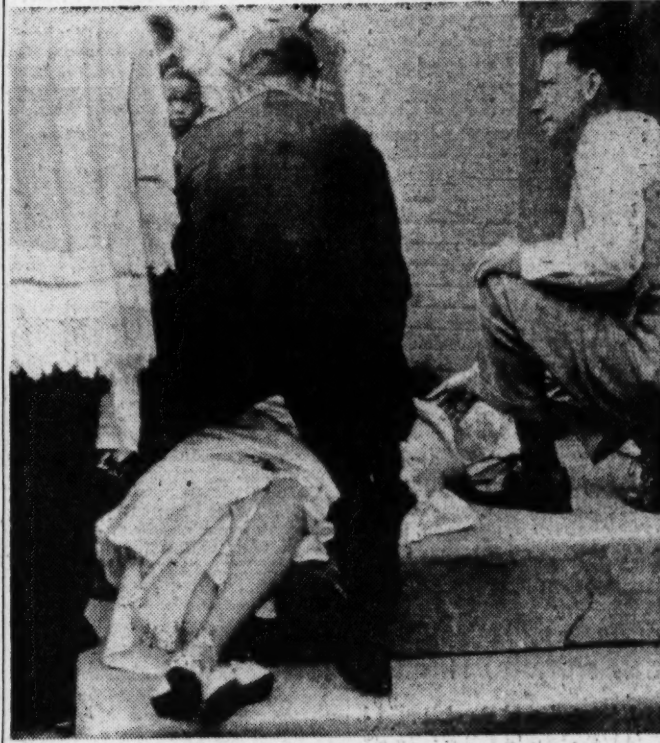

He said that roughly 20 per cent of the civilian output was free of controls at the peak of the war and extending down to V-J day, adding that by the end of August 1946 this had risen to about 40 per cent.

Senator Wiley (Rep., Wisconsin) has a bill ready for introduction at the opening of the new Congress in January which would repeal the Price Control Act.

U. S. URGES PEACE PARLEY TO ACCEPT COMMISSION'S AGREEMENT ON TRIESTE

Bride Dies at Her Wedding

BRIDE STUMBLES AT ALTAR, DIES OF EMBARRASSMENT

Collapses After Gown
Becomes Entangled —
Had Rheumatic Heart,
Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (UP)—Her physician said today that embarrassment caused the death of 21-year-old Angelina Rose de Fabrizio, who collapsed yesterday a few feet from the altar while her bridegroom paced the vestry, wondering what was delaying their wedding.

When her father tried to help her untangle the train of her bridal gown from around her feet, the physician said, the confusion proved to be too much for her heart.

Miss De Fabrizio and John Mastantuono, 21, her sweetheart since high school, became engaged when Mastantuono entered the Army three and one-half years ago. He was discharged eight months ago, but they didn't rush to marry.

Mastantuono went into the construction business. His fiancée quit her job as a secretary and picked out their furnishings. It was a happy day when Mastantuono found the house. They set a wedding date.

Yesterday, the tall, dark-haired bride-to-be was pinned a corsage on her mother and with her attendants left for the church where Mastantuono and the Rev. Francis Agius waited.

Head bowed, with her gray-haired father she stepped down the aisle to the strains of the wedding march, and friends turned to admire her beauty in brocade white satin.

She stumbled and grasped her father's arm. He patted her hand and stopped to help her untangle the train from her feet. She gasped and collapsed.

Her mother, Antonnette, hastened from the front pew. Her father carried her to the church lawn. Dr. Alexander Vivona was called and he said she was dead.

Inside the church, Mastantuono sent his best man to find out why the wedding was delayed. He left the church in tears.

"She had a rheumatic heart," Dr. Vivona said. "The embarrassment of stumbling over her train was too much for it."

Heart Attack.

APELDOORN, Holland, Oct. 7 (AP)—A military plane flown low over the home of the pilot's mother crashed into the roof of a nearby school today, killing the pilot and 11 school boys and seriously injuring at least seven others.

The flyer's mother, a witness, died of a heart attack.

The plane, a single-seater, struck a school hall in which about 25 boys were doing gymnastics. The left wing ripped a hole in the roof and burning gasoline poured into the hall, setting afire the boys' clothes.

TRUMAN 'CONSIDERING EVERY ASPECT OF MEAT SITUATION'

The proposal was not described, Anderson, leaving a Cabinet meeting Friday, said he had certain suggestions but he was trying to work out but he did not elaborate.

Ross made this assertion when he was asked about a proposal respecting the meat crisis which a reporter said had been made by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson. ## CONNALLY IN PLEA SAYS NO FURTHER CONCESSION WILL BE MADE ON TRIESTE

Smuts Warns Against
East-West Split—White
Russian Charges American 'Insult' in Treaty
Proposal.

By ROBERT EUNSON

PARIS, Oct. 7 (AP)—Senator Tom Connally (Dem.), Texas, told the peace conference today the United States would make no further concessions on the Trieste issue and urged the adoption of commission recommendations.

He was the first speaker in general discussion on the Italian treaty as the conference went into plenary session under the chairmanship of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin for its final stretch of treaty drafting.

Connally was followed by Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of South Africa, who called on the Slavic bloc and the western powers to forget the "cleavage" between them because it "may bode ill for the future of world peace."

Slavs Assail Treaty Clause.
The Slavs carried their fight on certain recommendations to the floor. V. Kiselev of White Russia asserting that Yugoslavia had been insulted by a United States proposal during the drafting of the Italian treaty. He asked the conference to reject paragraph four of Article 13 of the draft treaty, guaranteeing equal rights to Italians living in sectors of Istria being transferred to Yugoslavia.

Australian Delegate J. A. Beasley told the conference he would ask for a plenary vote on his proposal to set up machinery for the review of the treaties. It was defeated in the Italian commission.

Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov returned today from consultations with Premier Stalin in Moscow, and entered the conference chamber when the session was less than three hours old. His return brought all the Big Four foreign ministers into the plenary session.

Appeal by Connally.
Connally reminded the delegates that the outline of principles for the projected free zone had been backed by two-thirds of the Italian political commission and then added: "It outlines principles without which no settlement is possible."

He declared that, for the United States, the Trieste agreement was "one decision, one agreement" in which "no part can be separated from the whole."

"A just solution of the problem of Trieste and the frontier between Italy and Yugoslavia is the keystone of the peace treaty," he said. "Unless this statute becomes operative our obligations toward the population of Trieste cannot be discharged."

"The city must be founded on democratic principles. It must be free and independent, so organized that it can have a life of its own, free from outside influences, from any one power or group of powers."

Connally asserted that it was not enough to agree on words, "which can be and will be interpreted in various ways," but that the treaty and the United Nations Security Council must give residents of the zone the greatest opportunity to handle their own affairs.

Denial of Slavic Charge.
Connally replied to Slavic criticism that Trieste was intended as a British-American base on the Adriatic.

"No bases, either military, air or naval, are to be built or maintained in the area," he said. "No troops are to be sent there, except as directed by the Security Council in the exercise of its functions."

In opening the session, Bevin called on "the first delegate" of the United States, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. Byrnes asked the chair's permission to have Connally speak instead. Connally was one of the American members of the Italian political and territorial commission which drafted the report now before the conferences, including the principles for the statute on Trieste contained in a French compromise text.

Connally urged the nations surrounding Trieste to allow the city to be governed by its own people.

CLAY SAYS REICH IS NOW WAR THREAT SOON UNLESS IT BECOMES A PAWN

Otherwise, He Asserts, There Is No Reason to Worry for 15 or 20 Years—Views on Three Acquitted Nazis.

BERLIN, Oct. 7 (AP)—L. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy American military governor, expressed belief today that the world need not worry about Germany as a war threat for 15 or 20 years "unless it should become a pawn."

"I don't minimize at all Germany's possibilities to come back over a period of years," he told a press conference, "but our worries of Germany as a war threat go into the next 15 or 20 years, and not the nearer future unless it should become a pawn. Men don't fight with their hands any more."

Clay said the economic unification of the American and British zones of Germany had aroused Russian and French interest and helped promote an increase in trade and travel among all four zones.

"There is as yet no tendency for them to join us," he said. "However, international trade and travel between all zones has been increasing and friendly discussions are now going on to make such trade and travel even easier."

Political Merger Opposed.

He said a German request that the United States and British zones also be made a political entity had been opposed by the Americans because the Russians and French might misunderstand. He said United States and British authorities were contemplating making Bremen a free city. He forecast a 25 per cent reduction in military personnel in Berlin as a result of the merger.

He said the new four-power agreement of last week to liquidate Germany's industrial war potential, providing for periodical inspections in all zones, would work well and "help put an end to charges and rumors that war products are still being produced in some zones."

He said the United States shipping strike was "a very definite threat" to plans for increasing the German food ration in the American and British zones to 1550 calories daily next week.

Clay said the American-British plan of persuading Polish displaced persons to return home with the promise of 60 days extra food rations had been "highly successful, with a surprisingly big response."

Views on Acquitted Trio.

Clay said that if the Nazis acquitted at Nuremberg remained in the American occupation zone in the Military Government would prefer that they not be formally arrested by the Germans "until they can be tried under de-Nazification laws and found guilty."

Clay said that for the present, at least, the Americans opposed letting the Germans try the three on anything beyond de-Nazification charges. In any case, he said, strong efforts will be made to protect them from double jeopardy on charges from which they were acquitted by the International Military Tribunal.

He convicted under the de-Nazification statute in the United States zone, they would be liable to maximum penalties of 10 years confinement, confiscation of all their property and permanent banishment from public office.

Clay said he "doubted very much" that Germany could try them under present law could try them for high treason, and indicated American authorities were not now amenable to permitting establishment of special German courts to try them.

U. S. Planning Trials.

(Clay revealed that the American Military Government is setting up zonal courts to try hundreds of Germans as war criminals. The United Press reported. He said the defendants will be taken from among the 77,000 internees now held in the United States zone.

(He doubted that any more war criminals would be tried in international tribunals in Europe. The possibility of more international trials, he said, is being determined on a governmental level, but he indicated that the Soviet dissent on the Nuremberg verdicts ruled out any more four-power courts.

(The United States, he disclosed, therefore is speeding plans for its own trials, and American judges are being selected in the United States. They should arrive in Germany shortly, Clay said.)

(Clay said that of the 77,000 Germans now held in American camps, only 12,000 to 15,000 would be retained for "court action and possible trial by our own courts." He said the remainder would be turned over to German authorities for possible prosecution under the de-Nazification law. The Nuremberg acquittal of the SA as an organization would result in the release of several thousand internees, he said.)

BEVIN EXPECTED TO ATTEND MEETING OF U.N. ASSEMBLY

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—A Whitehall source said today that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin probably would lead the British delegation in the United Nations General Assembly scheduled to begin sessions Oct. 23.

V. M. Molotov, the Soviet foreign minister, will sail for New York Oct. 16 on the Queen Elizabeth. Numerous other United Nations delegates will travel on the same ship.

RAEDER ASKS TO BE SHOT INSTEAD OF SENT TO PRISON

Cites His Advanced Age and Failing Health — Schacht Arrested by German Police in Stuttgart.

NUERNBERG, Oct. 7 (AP)—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, builder of the German fleet and one of three men sentenced to life imprisonment by the International Military Tribunal, has appealed to the Allied Control Council to commute his sentence to death by shooting.

Raeder said his petition did not mean that he was pleading guilty as indicted, but was prompted by his advanced age of 70 and the state of his health.

He told the Control Council: "The resistance of my body is very low and the imprisonment would not last very long."

Raeder, who was convicted on three counts of the indictment—common plan or conspiracy, crimes against peace and war crimes—said the verdict against him was the result of "a mistake in the way the prosecution handled the 'Wehrmacht case.' This mistake, he said, was due to political interests.

He emphasized he would welcome the change of sentence as more honorable and said: "I testify that I make this petition in fullest possession of my mental powers and in complete command of my soul."

Meanwhile, German police in Stuttgart arrested Hjalmar Schacht an hour after the former German minister of economics arrived here. He was acquitted last Tuesday by the Nuremberg court.

Schacht's arrest was ordered by the ministry of state of Wurttemberg-Baden, and the president of the local de-Nazification court was present at his arrest.

Schacht had planned to take up residence with an old friend, at Backnang, a village near Stuttgart.

Of the other two acquitted defendants, Hans Fritzsche was staying at the home of friends in Nuremberg and his future plans were unknown. Franz von Papen still was waiting in the Palace of Justice jail for permission to enter the British zone in order

DEWEY BACKS TRUMAN PALESTINE APPEAL

Demands for Immediate Immigration Transcend Partisan Politics.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey seconded President Truman's recent request to the British to open Palestine to Europe's homeless Jews, in an address last night at a United Palestine Appeal dinner.

"I want to make it crystal clear to our British friends that demands for immediate immigration into Palestine far transcend partisan politics," the 1944 Republican presidential candidate said.

"Actually, they have the wholehearted support not only of the leadership of both political parties, but also of the vast majority of the American people."

"We should adjust our own immigration laws to permit the admission of our share of displaced persons, both Christians and Jews," he said.

R.A.F. PLANE FREED; FLIGHTS OVER YUGOSLAVIA SUSPENDED

ROME, Oct. 7 (AP)—British Royal Air Force officers here said today that all R.A.F. flights over Yugoslavia had been temporarily suspended as the result of the forcing down of an R.A.F. courier plane by a Yugoslav fighter at Nis last Friday.

A dispatch to Il Tempo earlier had reported the arrival of the courier plane in Taranto following its release by Yugoslav authorities.

In Belgrade, United States Ambassador Richard C. Patterson announced that C-47 transport planes flying over Yugoslavia were being used to transport arms and munitions between Vienna and Udine, Italy, on the route which skirts Yugoslavia. He said the pilots were given strict orders to avoid crossing over Yugoslavia.

Sale of Boats to Veterans.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Maritime Commission announced yesterday the first offering of 123 vessels under 65 feet in length to veterans at fixed prices, ranging from $100 to $17,000. The vessels, located on the coasts and in the Great Lakes, include craft suited to small commercial enterprise, water transportation, and pleasure cruising.

WELLES DEPLORES PALESTINE JEWS ALLIED ACQUITTAL ESTABLISH 11 NEW COLONIES IN DAY

Verdict Means Militaristic Clique Will Continue to Prepare for New War, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles predicted last night that the refusal of the Nuremberg court to judge the German General Staff guilty "will have far-reaching consequences to the detriment of world peace."

In his weekly broadcast, Welles said it is "sure" that the German officers who have been inculcated with the militaristic doctrines of Germany's past will continue to plan and to prepare for a new war.

The verdict, he asserted, will be regarded by the masses of German people "as proof of their own contention that the General Staff is free from war guilt."

"They will continue to look to it as their agency which alone can constitute that great and powerful Germany capable of realizing the ultimate ambition of the Germans to conquer and rule the world," Welles said.

"None of us can afford to forget that during the past 50 years the German General Staff has actually been the decisive factor in the termination of German foreign policy under the Kaiser, that of the short-lived Weimar Republic or that of Hitler."

Quebec Archbishop Calls Death Sentences 'Horrible But Just.'

GAMBIER, O., Oct. 7 (AP)—The justice of the war criminal trials at Nuremberg, a question raised here by Senator Taft (Rep.), Ohio, was affirmed yesterday by the Rt. Rev. Philip Carrington, Archbishop of Quebec.

He called the court's decision "a necessary and just action," in religious services conducted at Kenyon College for delegates to the conference on the heritage of the English-speaking peoples and their responsibility.

In a conference address Saturday Taft asserted the hanging of the 11 Nazis sentenced at Nuremberg would be "a blot on the American record we shall long regret."

Archbishop Carrington said his sermon was prepared a week ago, and that he spoke only for himself.

Britons on Party Kill German Boy

ISERLOHN, Germany, Oct. 7 (AP)—Two British Army officers pleaded guilty to manslaughter today in fatally wounding a 10-year-old German boy with shots from an automatic car during a joyride after a party. The sentence was not announced. One of the officers, Capt. Colin R. Park, was identified by counsel as the son of Air Chief Marshal Sir Keith Rodney Park.

PRAVDA COMMENT ON BYRNES SPEECH

By REMBERT JAMES

MOSCOW, Oct. 7 (AP)—Pravda declared yesterday that the speech of United States Secretary of State Byrnes in Paris last Thursday was made in an attempt to "overcome those alarming reactions which Byrnes' previous Stuttgart speech, aroused in France."

Byrnes, in an address before the American club in Paris approved by President Truman, asked Russia to join with the other three occupation powers in a 40-year treaty providing for demilitarization of Germany. His Stuttgart speech was delivered Sept. 6. E. Zhukov, foreign commentator in the official Communist party newspaper, said there was "nothing new" in Byrnes' latest arguments for a four-power treaty to keep Germany disarmed.

Zhukov questioned whether it was necessary to stretch the disarmament and demilitarization of Germany over a 40-year period, and suggested that fulfillment of the Potsdam program on disarmament would achieve the desired results.

"The destruction of the German general staff and the forbidding of the existence of any kind of war or semi-war organizations in Germany—as was made by Byrnes in his long-term treaty project—belongs to those absolutely non-negotiable measures which have already been foreseen under the capitulation terms for Germany," the article said.

Zhukov added: "Much of the Byrnes Paris speech was devoted to the German problem, and this undoubtedly was in a great measure to overcome those alarming reactions which Byrnes' previous Stuttgart speech aroused in France."

In Stuttgart, Byrnes urged that Germany be reunited under a government by Germans, and said that the United States did not consider the German-Polish border to be definitely determined.

Carry Out Quasi-Military Occupation of 25,000 Acres British Had Marked for Base.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 7 (UP)—British military sources reported today that the Jewish underground army Haganah had occupied the Negev area of Palestine in a one-day operation, hamstringing a plan by Britain to set up a Middle East arsenal there.

The coup, in which the Jews established 11 settlements in a dawn-to-dusk move yesterday, gave them some 25,000 acres marked for a British military zone under a plan drafted by Marshal Viscount Montgomery after his tour of the Middle East.

The quasi-military operation of the Jews, the British conceded, crippled the so-called "Morrison plan," calling for occupation of that region by the British army.

(In London, a Colonial Office spokesman said the land "obviously belongs to the Jews, and they are entitled to move in.")

Military quarters sailing air reconnaissance over the Negev area indicated that about 700 men and 300 women of the Haganah organization were there.

About 200 trucks were used to transport the settlers and their possessions. Jewish quarters said it would be difficult for the Army or Government to halt the establishment of the settlements because the land belongs to the Jewish National Fund and the Jewish Foundation Fund.

Other Jewish informants said Jewish leaders were planning to undertake "an illegal immigration" into Palestine.

Two Jewish youths were sentenced by a British military court today to 15 years imprisonment for complicity in the kidnapping of three British officers. They were Avram Dermal, 18 years old, and Moshe Mirzahi, 20, members of the underground Irgun Zvai Leumi.

Machine gun fire from a passing black sedan killed a Royal Air Force non-commissioned officer and wounded another seriously Sunday night in Jerusalem.

British Consider Moving Mediterranean Bases to South Africa.

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—An authoritative War Office source today said the British General Staff had proposed tentatively the withdrawal of British administrative and supply bases in the eastern Mediterranean including Palestine to the south African colonies of Kenya and Tanganyika.

The proposal envisaged retention of Britain's forward operational bases as long as practicable in such countries as the Sudan, Palestine, Trans-Jordan and Iraq, this source declared.

Meanwhile, informants at the residence of Prime Minister Attlee said President Truman had not yet answered the British leader's last communication on Palestine and that the message "called for a reply."

Truman asked the British Friday to open Palestine at once to "substantial" Jewish immigration. The Iraq Parliament issued a statement in Baghdad charging Truman's pronouncement on Palestine, "continued hostility to the Arabs and defiance of Islamic feeling, contradicted pledges made guaranteeing peoples liberty, security and self-determination."

SUPREME COURT BEGINS NEW TERM FULLY MANNED

Vinson Presides as Chief Justice—Black and Jackson, Figures in Row, Do Not Look at Each Other.

By PAUL M. YOST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The feud-torn Supreme Court, fully manned for the first time in more than a year, opened a new term today.

Justice Black and Justice Jackson, principals in an inner court row that Jackson termed "mere personal vendetta," did not look directly at each other. They sat four chairs apart in the places assigned to them by custom.

Mrs. Harry Truman, wife of the President, and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the new Chief Justice, were among a large group of friends and high Government officials who witnessed the brief ceremony.

Vinson, who sat for the first time in the chair of the Chief Justice, in the center of the high mahogany bench, stumbled almost imperceptibly as his foot touched the first step to the bench. Black touched his arm, as if to help him, but Vinson recovered himself quickly and did not lose balance.

Jackson took the chair which was vacant for the last year while he acted as chief United States prosecutor at the Nuremberg trial. At Vinson's right hand, in the chair of the senior court member, sat Black, appearing on the bench for the first time since Jackson assailed him for "bullying" tactics in a public statement at Nuremberg. He has not replied to Jackson's charges.

Black announced formally today the appointment of Vinson, Vinson, Black and Jackson smiled and nodded to friends in the courtroom, as did several of the justices.

Vinson displayed his customary calm, easy-going manner in presiding at his first Supreme Court session. He announced the death last August of James C. McReynolds, retired Supreme Court Justice. He paid tribute to McReynolds as "a vigorous, capable, determined and forthright member" of the court whose death "brought to a close a distinguished career and a life of devotion to duty."

About 40 attorneys were admitted to practice, some of them introduced by Attorney General Clark. A few motions were received, and Vinson's work in the open court was done for the day.

During the admission of attorneys, Jackson chatted and whispered with Justices Burton and Douglas. Occasionally they smiled broadly. Black talked only with Justice Frankfurter, and that conversation was brief.

The entire session took only 21 minutes.

Vinson succeeded the late Harlan F. Stone, who collapsed during a court session last April and died that night.

Jackson's name was added at midday to the calling list of President Truman for a visit late this afternoon. There was no indication of its nature.

PARIS MISTAKES ARE WORSE THAN VERSAILLES, SMUTS SAYS

DUBLIN, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Irish Independent quoted Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts today as saying that the Paris peace conference had made greater mistakes than the World War I Versailles conference, but that "because they are such bad mistakes they will eventually right themselves."

In a rare interview in Paris, the South African Prime Minister one of the last surviving Versailles peacekeepers, was reported to have explained, "nature will eventually push out what is unnatural."

Smuts was quoted as ascribing "two fatal blunders" to Versailles—"fantastically high" reparations and "the impossible Danzig corridor"—and as saying, "I realize that the mistakes are greater this time. My reply to the question of whether another war threatened was reported to be, 'that is in the hands of the great powers only.'"

LONDON, Oct. 7 (UP)—The body of Geoffrey De Havilland, famed airplane speed pilot, was washed ashore today at Whitstable, Kent.

De Havilland was killed Sept. 27 when an experimental jet plane he was piloting disintegrated in midair.

He had suffered head injuries and a fractured right arm and leg.

U.N. SCIENTISTS REPORTED COOL TO ATOM SUGGESTION

Mexican Compromise Proposed Primary Nuclear Plants in International Zone.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (UP)—Scientists of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission reportedly reacted coolly to a compromise plan for world atomic control suggested by Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico.

The Mexican suggestion was handed to the commission's scientific and technical committee for an opinion of its scientific possibility before the political committee of the U.N. body considers its political aspects at a meeting tomorrow morning.

In brief, Nervo had asked whether it would be possible for international control of two of the major processes required in the manufacture of atomic fuels to be applied, leaving to individual governments freedom to regulate the peaceful application of such nuclear fuels. The Mexican suggested that the large nuclear separation plants which produce fissionable material and the so-called primary reactors which regenerate fissionable materials might be confined to international zones.

In a closed meeting the scientists reportedly decided that the Mexican plan still left large loopholes and would not technically eliminate possible illegal manufacture of atomic weapons. An official communiqué on the meeting disclosed only the fact that Dr. N. A. Kramers of the Netherlands, committee chairman, would give the political committee the scientists' answer tomorrow.

BOEING CO. REPORTS ARMY ORDERS FOR SUPERBOMBER

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 7 (UP)—The United States Army Air Force has ordered a "substantial" number of giant B-50 superbombers, described as 59 per cent more powerful than the B-29s which burned out Japan's war industries, Boeing Aircraft Co. disclosed today.

"We believe the B-50's load, range and high speed performance is as outstanding it will be the country's principal bombardment aircraft for several years to come," Boeing President William M. Allen said.

He said the contract was received from the Air Force Materiel Command, following an earlier order for 60 of the aircraft. The Army did not disclose the total number of planes nor their cost.

'AMERICAN ACTION' SECRETLY FIGHTS CONGRESS 'LEFTS'

un-Americanism, against the infiltration of alien poison in our two-party system, against Red and all other colors of Fascism and Communism. . . . Only the consecrated services of thousands of volunteer political organizers and workers, with strong financial support, can turn back the onslaught."

Listed in the pamphlet as members of the National Council of American Action were:

Harold N. Moore, merchandising executive, Los Angeles; Edward D. Gray, a colonel in the Army Air Forces Reserve, Bellport, N. Y.; Malcolm McDermott, lawyer, Durham, N. C.; James E. McDonald, state commissioner of agriculture, Austin, Tex.; and James H. Gilson, president of the Caxton Printers, Ltd., Caldwell, Idaho. W. Homer Hartz, Board of Trade building, Chicago, is listed as treasurer.

This pamphlet, apparently designed for widespread distribution when the time is deemed ripe, is the second put out by American Action.

The first contains the same subject matter but is couched in even more temperate language. The original, which contains a form asking for subscriptions of from $5 to $5000, for some reason was not distributed.

Discarded Version's Charges. The discarded version charges that "leftists" largely control American movies and the theater; that many radio commentators disparage America and glorify Marxist doctrine; that a "large percentage of news writers are leftists, in bond to the CIO's Communist-tinged Newspaper Guild" and that there even are leftists among business men.

The same version set up a seven-point program, which included "restoring constitutional government to America," limiting the period a President may hold office, and restoring all the American rights and virtues which American Action seems to think no longer exist.

Whether significant or not, the first pamphlet has a 3x5-inch picture of the Statue of Liberty on the front cover. In the second version Liberty has been moved to the back cover and occupies a space about an inch square.

The organization was started in the summer of 1945. The first major conference was held secretly in Chicago in July of that year. Another was held in Los Angeles and a third at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Several prominent financial supporters of the Republican party are reported to have been present at these conferences, and it is said that $200,000 was pledged at the first meeting.

Among the specific objectives reported discussed were the defeat of Enos Artell, President Truman's choice for Congressman from the Fifth Missouri District; the re-election of Congressman Clare E. Hoffman (Rep.), Michigan, who is opposed by progressives, and of Senator William Langer (Rep.), North Dakota, and the election in 1948 of John W. Bricker of Ohio to the presidency.

Further activities of the organization are described in letters written within the last two months.

The first, marked "confidential," is written on Wood's letterhead and signed with his name. It is dated Aug. 15 and appears to have been sent to a selected list of prospects. It follows in part:

"It looks as though finally a national political movement has been started that you and I will want to support. It is called American Action and its initial and important aim is to defeat the announced plan of the radical minority groups to capture and control the 1946 Congress.

"The thing I like about it is that it is not 'just another organization' of propaganda, but one of direct political action within congressional districts. It appears to be sound in that it is concentrating in the marginal districts where there are good chances for success and as fast as funds are sufficient to do a thorough job it is expanding to other districts where real American Congressmen are being threatened with the PAC purge.

"I am contributing a substantial amount to the movement and hope you will join me in contributing whatever you wish. Checks should be payable or stocks transferred to W. Homer Hartz."

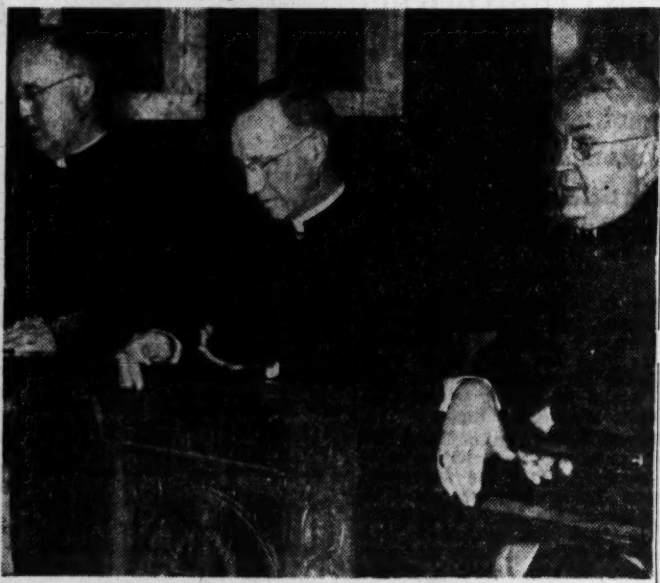

Letter Signed by Gray. Another letter, on stationery of the organization, is dated Aug. 28 and signed with the name of Gray, who explained he was acknowledging a letter to Wood in Wood's absence. Gray said:

"American Action, under the leadership of Capt. Edward A. Hayes of Chicago, naval veteran of both world wars and past national commander of the American Legion, is organizing in selected districts in half a dozen states and is adding additional districts as sufficient funds are received to a thorough job therein. "Since it is always more satisfactory to receive information of this nature from someone you know, I am going to ask if you will call Robert H. Harris of Harris & Rose, Bob Christenberry of the Hotel Astor Corp., or Sam Weldon of the First National Bank for further details."

A third letter, also marked "confidential," was sent out by Hayes on the organization's letterhead Sept. 16. It is a follow-up to Wood's letter of Aug. 15 and reads in part:

"The undersigned (Hayes) and his associates took charge of American Action a short time ago. Our plan contemplates the development of doorbell-ringing organizations within selected congressional districts. Statistical analyses have been made, marginal districts have been determined and records of incumbents as to submission to collectivists' domination have been scanned. "We are in process of developing such organizations in Missouri, party, Archbishop Ritter entered the cathedral. After prayer at the cardinal's tomb, the drive to the residence was resumed, and the line looped around Taylor avenue, West Pine boulevard and Euclid avenue, to come to the residence on the south side of Lindell.

Apostolic Delegate Arrives. Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, arrived from Washington a few minutes after 1 p.m. He was met by Msgr. John P. Cody, Chancellor of the St. Louis Archdiocese, and was escorted to a waiting automobile, which was recognized as the red Buick formerly used by the late Cardinal Glennon. The initials, J.J.G., formerly on the door of the car, had been replaced by J.E.R.

The delegate was taken to the Lindell boulevard residence, to await Archbishop Ritter's arrival, for their luncheon engagement.

At the residence, before luncheon, Archbishop Ritter said to reporters:

"I am very happy to be here, and I hope God will bless my work among you. I shall work to advance the cause of religion and the civic and social welfare of the community."

In reply to a question, the Archbishop said he considered Communism a present danger, and religion its best antidote. "The more spiritually minded the people are, the more they will combat Communism," he said.

He declined to discuss diocesan policies, saying he would need time to become familiar with conditions here. Pointing to an oil portrait of his predecessor, he remarked: "Remember, good Archbishop Glennon was here nearly 43 years."

They relate said he intended to follow the administrative policy of his predecessor, and that he contemplated no radical changes. He declined to speak of details of policy, saying: "Remember, good Archbishop Glennon was here nearly 43 years, and I have just come. We don't have many Glennons."

As to his personal arrangements, he said he intended to remain at the Lindell boulevard residence, and had no plans for a country home, such as he had near Indianapolis. As for gardening, which was one of his activities there, he said: "I'll be too busy to raise tomatoes here." He said he would say mass daily in the residence chapel.

Most carefully guarded item of Archbishop Ritter's hand baggage was a case containing the three Papal documents which certify his appointment and authority. In a meeting late this afternoon, it will be the duty of the delegate and the six archdiocesan consultants to inspect these documents. The delegate will then administer the oath of office to the archbishop. The consultants, headed by Bishop Donnelly, have been in charge of the diocesan affairs since Cardinal Glennon's death last March.

Many clerical and lay friends bade Archbishop Ritter farewell at Indianapolis Union Station this morning. The principal ceremony in his honor, however, was a re-

Oklahoma, Illinois, Wisconsin, New York, California and Washington, to assist congressional candidates opposed to Communist tendencies.

Hayes went on to say he had been assured of the co-operation of top Republicans and "anti-New Deal Democrats," that he intended to build an organization that would continue beyond the present campaign and that he expected to enlist the support of a good many veterans.

YUGOSLAV COURT TO LET 22 TESTIFY FOR ARCHBISHOP

14 Others Barred as Defense Witnesses—Prosecution Sought to Block All of Them.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, Oct. 7 (AP)—The people's court decided today to allow 22 witnesses to testify today for Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Yugoslavia, over strenuous opposition of the prosecution. Fourteen others were barred.

The Archbishop is on trial for his life, accused of war crimes and collaboration with the puppet rule of Dr. Ante Pavelic in Croatia. After the court blocked prosecution efforts to bar the testimony of all defense witnesses as "bias-phemy," the defense offered testimony that Archbishop Stepinac had attacked "forceful leaders" of the puppet government in speeches and had protested to Pavelic over crimes committed by Pavelic's Ustachi, a terrorist organization. Documents were represented also to show the Archbishop opposed mass conversion of members of the Orthodox Church to the Roman Catholic Church.

The court did not say why it refused to hear 14 of the defense witnesses. It listened to 80 for the prosecution earlier in the trial. Ivo Politeo, chief defense lawyer, told the court the Archbishop gave orders that no distinction was to be made between races. He contended Archbishop Stepinac engaged in no political work.

He contended that a purported copy of the Archbishop's reports, which the prosecution alleged was sent to Rome in 1943, was false and unsigned. Natko Katicic, another defense lawyer, presented documents showing the Archbishop was active in obtaining freedom for many Serbs from concentration camps.

Six priests testified that they had been ordered to refrain from political activities. In the prosecution's attempt to bar all defense witnesses, Prosecutor Jacob Blazevic told the court:

"We can't permit the blasphemy of the people, following the enthronization. In the mass, the Papal Delegate will be celebrant and Archbishop Ritter will assist, with about 40 priests in attendance. The sermon will be preached by Archbishop James H. Hayes of Omaha, formerly a priest of the Indianapolis archdiocese. A dinner at Hotel Chase will follow."

Hunt Pressed for American Pilot, 31 Others Reported Held by Lolos

Only Friendly Tribesman,
General's Aide Admitted to Area Where Chinese Plane Fell.

CHUNGKING, Oct. 7 (AP)—A friendly Lolo tribesman and a Chinese general's aide—the only two permitted by hostile natives to pass—were searching the wilds of western China today for an American pilot and 31 other persons reported held by Lolos since their Chinese airliner crashed Sept. 20.

Rifle fire drove off one search plane carrying a professional parachutist. He had hoped to sight the wreckage and jump in an effort to aid the occupants of the crashed plane who, it was reported, kept Lolos at bay for a time with sidearms.

The airliner crashed 60 miles south of Sichang, in the same general area in which the United States Army Graves Registration Service is making its own search for five United States Army Air Forces crewmen believed captives of the Lolos for more than two years.

The airliner pilot, Capt. Andrew Longbotham of Pasadena, Calif.,

Associated Press Wirephoto.
CAPT. LONGBOTHAM

was the only American reported aboard the Chinese National Aviation Corp. plane.

Plane Still Not Found.
First reports of the crash location were received Sept. 28. Gen. Ho Kow-kwang, Chinese Army commandant at Sichang, sent a 17-man relief expedition into the rugged area near the North Burma border, but the Lolos would allow only a Lolo guide and the general's aide to pass. Gen. Ho telegraphed Chungking yesterday that the downed plane still had not been found.

A Lolo family near a village called Ahbuluboo had taken charge of the passengers, all of whom were reported to have survived the crash without serious injury, the general reported. The family, he added, had "tried their best to protect them." Gen. Ho appealed to Chungking for salt, cloth and medicines, presumably so rescuers might be able to barter their way into the mountains and perhaps ransom captives.

Capt. Robert W. Pottschmidt of Wenatchee, Wash., who has made several fruitless search flights over the area, said his plane had been hit by rifle fire from the ground.

Unable to locate the crashed craft, he dropped long cloth streamers painted with Chinese characters instructing anyone on the ground to use them to give directions. Gunfire was the only reply.

Magistrate's Report.

The last available report on the crash victims, Pottschmidt said, was contained in a letter from a Chinese magistrate whose village was four days' hike from the scene.

"According to reported news, the Lolos dare not approach the wrecked plane," the letter said. "Inside the plane, guns were opening fire."

"I, my humble self, already have granted a heavy reward and sent Wang Ching-chung (a Chinese) together with Mock Kwei-anhu, a Lolo, to investigate."

"I, my humble self, have tried to get the Lolos to proceed to rescue our endangered countrymen, but I have not much money in hand. Please transmit word to the Chinese National Aviation Corp. and family members to bring medical aid, food, clothing, and hurry here quick."

(In Pasadena, Calif., Mrs. Vera J. Longbotham, the pilot's mother, said she had been notified he was "safe and unharmed" after a forced landing, the United Press reported. She said a letter from the New York office of the airline reported that the plane was found six days after it landed and that the plane and passengers were safe and unhurt.)

Lin Yue-hwa, writing in the journal of the West China Border Research Society of an expedition into Lololand in 1943, describes the Lolos as a feuding people who raid nearby Chinese areas to obtain slaves.

"Malaria was a universal illness among the Lolos," Lin writes. "Many unknown contagious diseases infest the area. The Lolos believe in no medicines but perform rites to ward off evil spirits."

Lin compares the Lolo fighting with that of Bedouins on Arabian plains and the Indians of North America.

He says the Lolos probably are descendants of Tsouan barbarians of the Fifth Century called Lulus. Both the men and women drink alcohol, live by agriculture and hunt and eat field rats.

WARRANTS FOR 4 ON CHARGE OF PASSING BOGUS COINS

Fugitive warrants for the removal of four St. Louisans to Little Rock, Ark., for prosecution on charges of passing counterfeit coins were received by United States Marshal William B. Fahy today.

The four are Floyd C. Collier and his 16-year-old wife, Barbara Jane, Frank M. Money and Miss Helene Evelyn Thompson. Collier is being held for federal authorities in East St. Louis. Mrs. Collier was arraigned under the juvenile delinquency act before United States District Judge Fred L. Wham in East St. Louis Friday and placed on probation. Miss Thompson, 367 North Boyle avenue, is held in City Jail and Money, who lived at the same address, is serving a year in the Workhouse for non-support of his wife.

Secret service agents who made the arrests said the four made counterfeit coins in a tourist cabin at Little Rock during a 10-day stay there last month and used the coins in slot machines.

Falls From Eighth Floor, Lives.
BOSTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Leo Graham, 25 years old, of Berlin, N. H., fell from the eighth floor of the Manger Hotel yesterday but landed on the roof of a fourth floor annex and doctors said he probably would live. He suffered a skull fracture.

POSSIBLE 3 BILLION TREASURY SURPLUS

Fiscal Year 'Cash' Prospect
Leads to Talk of Reducing Income Tax.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Officials said last night that the Treasury might end the 1947 fiscal year with a "cash" surplus of almost three billion dollars, leading some observers to believe that Congress may try to utilize that cash to reduce income taxes.

The Administration has said repeatedly that it did not believe reduced taxes would be possible next year. House Republicans, however, have asserted that, if the G.O.P. wins control of Congress in the November elections, they would cut individual taxes 20 per cent.

The cash surplus will be reached because some items are charged against the Government as 1947 budget expenditures—although no cash will be actually paid out until a later fiscal year.

Some political observers believe that tax-reduction advocates will urge the Treasury to spend some of this cash surplus on current expenditures and credit the money saved in cutting income taxes.

Man Found Unconscious Dies.

Flashes of Life

Nearing Par.

NEW YORK—Nathaniel Vickers figures 100 is par for the course, so he's giving up golf next Wednesday.

Vickers, a retired architect, played golf most of the summer, but vows his last game will be on Wednesday—his 100th birthday.

Naturally Free.

DURANGO, Colo.—Ralph Slade dug for water at his new home—and got natural gas. The underground fuel will be piped into the home.

Slade still needs water.

*Chute Delivery.

SAN PEDRO, Calif.—Phil Eastman, Chicago, delivered a fish to the Harbor Commercial Fishermen's Fleets yesterday—by parachute.

With a scroll of greeting from Mayor Harley Knox of San Diego in his pocket and a large tuna in his arms, Eastman stepped out of blimp.

En route down, his parachute fouled in high-tension wires. But he finally worked himself free and delivered the fish to Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

UNION MAKES NEW OFFER IN STRIKE AT PITTSBURGH

Proposal Kept Secret Till Duquesne Power Concern Has Chance to Look It Over.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 7 (AP)—A new union offer in the power strike was slated for presentation to Duquesne Light Co. officials today as a rebellious group within the union pushed plans for recognition.

George L. Mueller, president of the independent union of about 3500 workers, said his group's proposal would be secret until "the company looks it over."

Department stores, closed more than a week since union pickets brought a stoppage of streetcar service, reopened today using emergency power generators. Many smaller businesses also reopened.

Another development was the announced closing of about 12 parochial schools. Church authorities said lack of trolley service was the main factor. Public schools remained open.

The revolt within the independent union's ranks gained momentum with the dissenting faction—estimated by its leaders at 700 members—joining the AFL-United Mine Workers' Union, District 50, and petitioning the National Labor Relations Board for recognition as a collective bargaining agency.

Regional NLRB Director Frank M. Klier said an investigation was under way to determine qualifications of the group.

A mass meeting of about 1500 citizens, at a rally called by the newly organized Civic-Community Committee yesterday, urged a new vote by union membership on the question of arbitration. The company says it stood ready to arbitrate the wage dispute but the union has repeatedly refused. The union struck 14 days ago on demands for a 20 per cent wage boost to bring the basic average salary to $14.1 from $11.8. The company has offered a 5 per cent pay increase.

GREEN SAYS AFL UNIONS WILL SEEK WELFARE FUNDS

Schwellenbach's name from the speakers' list had any significance, Green told a reporter: "No, I don't think so." Other AFL officers said his name was omitted deliberately.

The list includes the head of one of the Labor Department agencies, Maj. Gen. G. B. Erskine of the Retraining and Re-employment Administration.

Other speakers were Reconstruction Director John R. Steelman, Secretary of War Patterson, Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer and TVA Chairman David E. Lilienthal.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, when asked in Washington about a report that Truman planned to attend the AFL meeting, declined to comment. Green had invited Truman to address the convention.

The convention opened with a touch of Hollywood. A batch of film stars, including Alexis Smith and Jane Wyman, arrived to seek AFL intervention in solving the film capital's 11-day jurisdictional dispute between rival AFL groups over which should build studio sets.

In a report issued last night by the executive council the federation said that drastic increases in the cost of living need not have occurred if President Truman had insisted that any wage increases, freely negotiated, should not break price ceilings. The federation said it had co-operated with the presidential order issued Aug. 18, 1945, just after V-J day, which allowed industry and labor to bargain freely over wage increases so long as they did not break price ceilings, but it added that "some unions outside the federation did not consider the needs of reconversion."

"The President settled the steel strike by breaking the price ceiling of a strategic commodity," the AFL asserted, "arranging a steel price increase of 35 per cent, or 8 per cent, before the steel companies agreed to grant an 18 1/2-cent wage increase."

Another Order Cited.

Another executive order was issued, the AFL related, which superseded the Government's wage policy of Aug. 18 and required that "OPA grant price increases to companies requesting them on the basis of a wage increase approved by the Wage Stabilization Board."

"This provision for paying wage increases by raising prices has had a disastrous effect on the entire economy," the AFL report said.

"It resulted in price increases throughout industry which have caused a rapid increase in the cost of living. . . . This drastic living cost need not have occurred if the President's wage policy of Aug. 18 had been observed and if he had insisted that it remain in effect. Those unions which broke price ceilings to get 18 1/2 cents followed a short-sighted policy."

The executive council of the AFL accused Russia of attempting to use the Paris peace conference to extend Soviet control and create "new opportunities for aggression."

The council's report complained also of lack of labor representation in the United Nations. "The delaying tactics and aggressive accusations used by the Soviet representatives in the Paris

NAMED BY SANITATION GROUP

George S. Russell, president of Russell & Axon, consulting engineering firm at 6635 Delmar boulevard, University City, was elected vice president of the United States Federation of Sewage Works Associations at Toronto, Canada, yesterday, at the federation's first joint meeting with the Canadian Institute on Sewage and Sanitation.

Russell, who lives at 7005 Lindell avenue, University City, is consultant on sanitary engineering. The Toronto meeting was attended by more than 800 United States and Canadian representatives.

conference make plain that the agents of the Communist party are not seeking peace but new opportunities for aggression," the AFL council report said.

"Representatives of democratic countries have been forced to concentrate on resisting new aggression instead of deliberating on terms and conditions of peace. Russia and the countries it now controls, the report said, are 'not interested in making peace but in utilization of the peace forum as well as the occupation of conquered territory as opportunities to extend control of the Communist party and expand a despotism as cruel and bloody as any recorded in history.'"

Wants Justice for All.

Saying that "until lately the democracies failed to realize that the U.S.S.R. was bent on imperialism and aggressive policies to expand its power," the report added that "it is plain that free government is imperiled by further policies of appeasement; we expect our Government to insist upon justice for all states whether small or large."

"It is easy to see now," the report said, "that unflinching insistence on moral standards and the rights of small nations could have prevented World War II."

The council reported AFL membership at 7,151,808 and said the organization's $2,000,000 treasury balance Aug. 31, 1945, despite receipts since then of $2,280,000, had now been reduced to $1,742,000, principally due to organizing expenditures. The council recommended that the convention order an increase in union per capita payments to the federation to meet greater demands on AFL funds.

FORMER CONVICT SHOT WHEN CAUGHT IN SHOP

Policeman Says Prisoner Broke Away and Tried to Escape.

Kenneth L. Oatman, former convict, was shot and seriously wounded last night by a policeman, who reported that Oatman attempted to escape after being caught in the White Line Laundry Co. branch at 4496 West Florissant avenue.

Patrolman Edward McDonald, Ruskin avenue station, said he cried "Halt" and fired a warning shot before firing twice at Oatman, who was running east in West Florissant avenue after breaking away when being searched for a weapon.

A bullet struck Oatman in the back and passed out through his chest. He is unconscious at City Hospital.

McDonald, walking his beat at 7:20 o'clock, saw Oatman in the laundry company branch and discovered a broken pane in a side window. He ordered the intruder to crawl through the window and was searching him when he jerked away and started running, the officer reported.

Oatman, who is 32 years old and gave an address in the 3700 block of North Garrison avenue, has served prison terms in Florida, Washington and Missouri, police said.

GORIZIA ITALIANS YELL 'DUCE,' FIGHT WITH SLOVENES

in Disorders
Accompanying Pro-
Yugoslav Demonstration.

GORIZIA, Venezia, Giulia, Oct. 7 (AP)—Bitter Italian-Yugoslav differences in this hotly disputed area were fanned by an outbreak of violence in which 15 to 20 persons were injured yesterday during a demonstration of the pro-Yugoslav Italo-Slovene Anti-Fascist Union.

The trouble broke out when crowds shouting "Duce, Duce!" attempted to break up the demonstration, which had been authorized by the Allied military government as a "purely cultural" observance of the century-old Slovene tradition of celebrating the grape harvest.

Rocks, smoke bombs and other missiles were thrown at the demonstrators in the worst display of violence in the Gorizia area since Aug. 9, when at least 30 persons were injured during a pro-Italian demonstration.

For a week prior to the celebration all demonstrations had been barred to decrease the danger of disorders.

The disturbance was preceded by explosions which blew up tracks on the Trieste-Gorizia railway over which the participants in the festival were to travel.

The disorders in Gorizia began when several floats appeared in a parade illustrating "the suffering of the Slovene people during the war." One, depicting a Slovene being hanged by two German SS men, was greeted with Fascist salutes, catcalls and jeers. This incident was ignored by the 2000 paraders.

Five marchers were struck down by missiles, but the parade, which was protected by the Allied-organized Venezia Giulia civil police as well as military police of the American 88th Division, completed its scheduled route.

Further disorders occurred later when 10 or more paraders who entered the Italian section were beaten. Six required hospitalization.

Later police reported they had arrested 17 persons in the act of throwing missiles at the marchers.

Gorizia is on the Italian side of the proposed "French line" separating Italy from Yugoslavia.

JAP CONSTITUTION BARRING ARMED FORCES IS APPROVED

House Votes for Measure Limiting Powers of Emperor and Granting Bill of Rights
Over Communist Objections.

By RUSSELL BRINES.
TOKYO, Oct. 7 (AP)—A revised "anti-war" constitution outlawing the maintenance of armed forces, drastically curtailing the Emperor's political powers and granting the people a specific bill of rights was accepted by the House of Representatives today.

The vote was 342 to 5, four Communists and one independent dissenting.

This means the cabinet of Shigeru Yoshida will resign within six months after promulgation of the constitution and the House of Peers will disappear at end of the current extraordinary session.

The new document was prepared under American guidance.

No major objections developed during three months' continuous debate on the fundamental points of outlawing war, lessening the Emperor's position and legally specifying the people's rights. Acceptance of the constitution had been assured by strong support voiced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and the Emperor himself.

Basis for Opposition.

The Communists consistently opposed the constitution on the ground that it left the Emperor too much power, and that it was imposed from the top and did not come from the people.

General questioning in the Diet disclosed Japanese hopes that the document would permit the continuance of the Emperor as a "symbol" of state, that it would not eliminate Japan's family system or other traditional cultural heritages, and that Japan would be protected adequately in the event of any future conflict.

Debates reflected the general belief that the United States would defend Japan.

At the outset of their discussions on the war renunciation clause, the Japanese took pride in the fact that theirs would be the first national charter prohibiting armed forces. But later international quarrels increased their apprehension, and toward the end of the discussion speakers were looking abroad for protection.

High Government officials have expressed the opinion the constitution approaches the ideal of placing the Emperor in a position similar to that of the British King. He would continue as a symbol of state unity, they said, while ministers responsible to the people handle political affairs.

Provides Two Houses.

The document provides for a Diet composed of a House of Representatives and a House of Counsellors, replacing the present House of Peers. Both will be elected for specified terms, and the cabinet will be responsible to them.

The Constitution is expected to be promulgated Nov. 3, on the birth anniversary of the late Emperor Meiji, who gave modern Japan its first Constitution, and to become effective in April 1947. Property taxes totalling $5,100.

BRINKLEY OF MELENDES CASE GETS 10 YEARS IN KILLING

Andrew Brinkley, a leading figure in the notorious Melendes case, was sentenced to 10 years in the state penitentiary today on his plea of guilty to a reduced charge of manslaughter in the fatal beating in September 1943 of Pvt. Glold Parker of Jefferson Barracks.

Brinkley had been convicted of second-degree murder by a jury in November 1943 and sentenced to life imprisonment as an habitual criminal but the Missouri Supreme Court reversed a demanded the case for a new trial. Circuit Judge Robert L. Aronson, in passing sentence, accepted the recommendation of John J. Bantle, assistant circuit attorney.

Parker died of a fractured skull received in a fight with Brinkley in front of a rooming house at 3337 Washington boulevard. Earlier, Brinkley was a state witness in several investigations of the death of Edward Melendes, who died in a police cell after a severe beating on July 27, 1942. Brinkley has been in city jail since his case was remanded.

VETERAN STARTS FOR PACIFIC IN VESSEL HE BUILT HIMSELF

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7 (AP)—In an 85-foot schooner he built himself, Hermann C. Schmidt, a welder, sailed yesterday on a 25,000-mile cruise to Okinawa, the Solomons and other island battlefields of the Pacific war.

With him were his wife and a crew of seven friends, who were to man the Tondelayo for the next year and a half. First stop will be Florida, where Schmidt hopes to be joined by three more to round out his crew.

The schooner, which carries 3000 square feet of sail in its two-masted rig, has an 18-foot beam and a nine-foot draft. It can accommodate 12 persons. Schmidt estimates he put in 408 work days on it and spent $17,000 for materials.

TWO HURT IN ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGING OF SHOTGUNS

Wilford Brewer, 2801 Sims avenue, Overland, was wounded in both hands yesterday when the shotgun he was repairing at his home was discharged accidentally. He was taken to the St. Louis County Hospital, where the middle finger on his right hand was amputated.

Taylorville (Ill.) Chief of Police

Howard Bullard was injured seriously in the accidental discharge of a shotgun at the Edwardsville Gun Club, where he was participating in a trap shooting contest yesterday. He was attempting to eject a shell that had jammed in an automatic shotgun. His left hand and arm were injured in the blast. Bullard was taken to the Alton Memorial hospital at Alton.

3 LED FROM BURNING BUILDING

Three persons were led from their smoke-filled apartment at 931 Hickory street, by Patrolman Robert Freihaut of the Lynch Street Police District yesterday, after flames from an overheated oil stove set fire to the building. Freihaut, notified of the fire by another tenant of the building, led Marvin Call, his sister, Miss Jean

Call, and their mother, Mrs. Bertha Call, down the stairs to the street. Firemen, called by Patrolman Elva Brown, extinguished the flames. Damage to the building was estimated at $300 and to the contents at $150.

York's Homer Deciding Blow in Boston's 3-2 Victory in First Game

Only Clean Run of Game; Pollet Loser

By J. Roy Stockton

Eddie Dyer and his Cardinals looked at each other this morning and everybody agreed that things were strictly on the normal side. The Cardinals have been in jams all season. It did not seem strange or surprising and is wasn't particularly discouraging to be trailing the Boston Red Sox by a victory after the first game of the world series.

That first game was a tough one to lose, of course. It could have gone the other way so easily. It was a game to live nightmares. If Howard Pollet could have put over one more effective strike on Tommy McBride. If Higgins had been more successful when he tried to pull back his bat in the second inning. If that grounder to Marion hadn't skidded in the Boston ninth. And last and above all, if Pollet hadn't made that pitch to Rudy York so deliciously sweet in the tenth inning.

It was Rudy York in Tenth. York's bat really decided the opening contest. The big right-handed slugger, the man who came back this year, whacked a home run high into the left field bleachers with one out in the tenth and it was the only run of the afternoon that wasn't tainted. The wallop broke a 2-2 tie and gave the American League's Dyer underdog Redbirds.

Pollet said it was a curve that York hit so effectively, a curve exactly like the one he had thrown two innings before, when York hit a broad-shouldered giant of an athlete, had popped helplessly in foul territory to Joe Garagiola.

York insisted in the Boston clubhouse that he hit the homer off a fast ball. Pollet ought to know what it was. He made the pitch.

Anyhow It Was Too Good. But sideline observers agreed that whether it was a curve or a fast ball, it was too good, far enough toward the right field plate to permit York to meet the ball with the heavy part of his bat and send it almost to the concession stand high up in the bleachers.

That was the only home run of the afternoon, for all the swishing of bats by the powerful Golden Red Sox of Tom Yawkey and the equally eager swinging by the Redbird hitters. Each other's run of the contest was born of lesser things in the baseball picture, a pebble here, a soft spot there, the sun shining into an outfielder's eyes, or a grounder caroming off an infielder's glove.

And until late in the ninth inning—there were two out and two strikes on McBride when he tied the score with a single—there had been two of the tainted runs to only one for the Red Sox and it seemed they were about to upset their powerful rivals and make off with the victory.

Higgins' "Unconscionable" Hit. The Red Sox were first to score and it was an involuntary hit that nudged the run over the plate. Pollet started the trouble by hitting York with a pitch as he tried to keep the ball inside. Then Howard Doerr pitched too carefully to Bobby Doerr and walked him. Pinky Higgins was trying to draw back his bat from a pitch he didn't like when the wood met the ball and sent a looping single to center that scored York from second.

Hitters on both sides were helpless then through the ninth after the Cardinals got a break they needed to score. With one out Red Schoendienst hit a single off Hughson's glove to Pesky and Red advanced while Doerr, after fumbling Moore's grounder, threw out Terry at first. Musial then lined a double against the right field screen to put Pesky, Doerr and tie the score at 1-1.

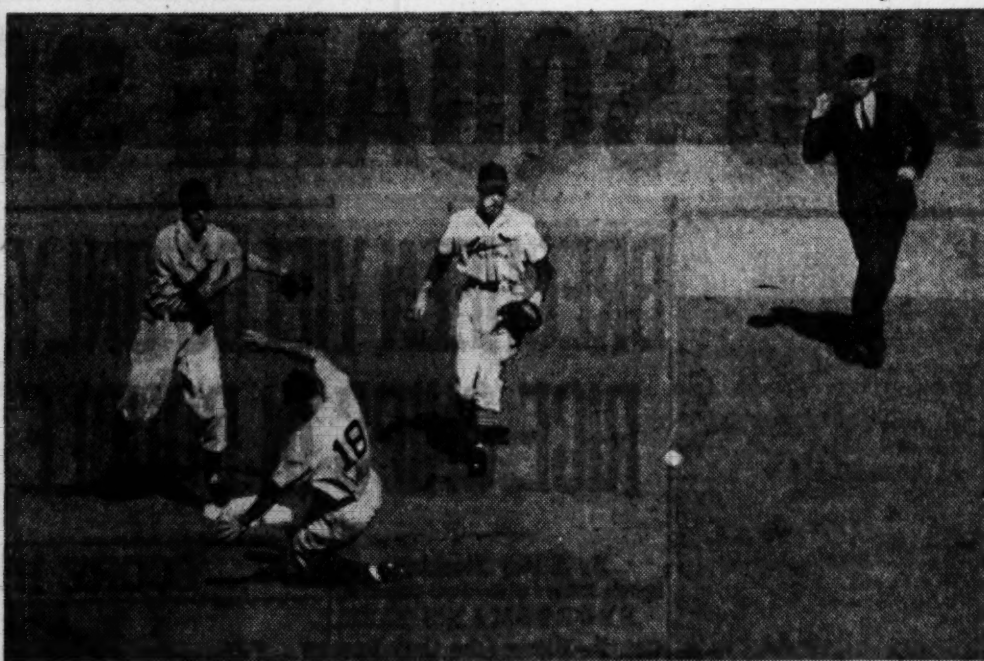

Two were out in the eighth when the Cardinals were favored by another break that produced a run that gave them a temporary lead. There wasn't anything lucky about George Kurovski's single to left, but George was still a long way from home, two were out and young Joe Garagiola seemed over-matched by Kurovski's left. The rugged right-hander quickly had two strikes on Joe, and seemed to have won the duel when the Pride of the Hill sent a seemingly harmless fly to center field.

Out there the fielder of the year was on duty. But Dominic DiMaggio misjudged the ball, or lost it in the sun, or both, and the drive carried over his head. Sprinting back toward the wall, Dominic put a glove on the ball, but it caromed away. Kurovski, running with the crack of the bat, rounded second, and then at third collided with Higgins, who was standing squarely on the bag.

It was interference, plain and simple, but the spectators weren't sure whether the umpires would rule it that way, and there was much screaming as Kurovski jogged toward the plate, while the ball, relayed from DiMaggio, was heading for third base well ahead of Garagiola, who was trying to turn his hit into a triple. Joe was out and the play was made while Kurovski was still a step from the plate.

Just Another Argument Lost. Umpire Lee Ballanfant ruled Kurovski safe at the plate and the Red Sox rubbed salt from their dugout and milled around the umpire, but the decision stood and when the scoreboard boy posted that precious run the crowd roared with happy relief. The Cardinals were ahead, 2 to 1, with only three Boston outs to go. The fickle fates, it seemed,

McBride Out---And a Double Play

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
SHORTSTOP MARTY MARION of Cardinals throws to first for a double play after stepping on second to retire TOMMY MCBRIDE, Red Sox outfielder, in first inning of second game. RED SCHOENDEIENST and UMPIRE CHARLEY EERRY are in the scene. Dom DiMaggio hit the grounder to Marion. It was McBride who singled home the tying run in the ninth inning of the opening game.

8th Army Team Victor in Japan Gridiron Opener

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 7 (AP)—Sparked by Dick Gray, former Oregon State College star, and a pair of line-cracking backs—Noel Good, Indianapolis, and Napoleon Bell, Youngstown, O.—the Eighth Army Chicks beat the First Cavalry Division 33-0 in the opening game of American football league of Japan Sunday.

Gray provided the game's outstanding moment in the fourth quarter, intercepting a First Cavalry pass and running 70 yards to score. In the third period Good and Bell, running from a T formation, drove from midfield to goal, with Bell making the score. Larry Cooney, Pittsburgh, converted after the first touchdown.

Cooney, former Penn State backfield star, also crossed the goal line in the first quarter but his touchdown was nullified by a holding penalty.

In another American League game, Kobe Base beat the Ninth Corps 17 to 0.

Dallas Leads, 3-0, In Dixie Series

DALLAS, Oct. 7 (AP)—Atlanta's Crackers make their last stand tonight in the battle for the baseball championship of Dixie with Earl McGowan, the Southern Association's leading pitcher, to take the mound against Dallas's Hank Oana in the fourth game of the series.

Dallas made it three straight yesterday as the Texas League champs splurged for five runs in the eighth to break up a tight pitching duel between the Crackers' Bill Ayers and tall Tom Fulg. The Rebels won, 5-1, as a crowd of 11,088 turned out to greet Dallas's return to the home ballpark.

The three games thus far have drawn 23,596 and gross receipts of $31,945.85 of which $15,334.01 goes to the players.

STEINER IS WINNER IN 30 KILOMETER RACE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7 (AP)—Bill Steiner, representing the Maccabees Club of New York, captured the national title in the 30 kilometer street run yesterday, turning in a time of one hour, 38 minutes, two seconds.

Steiner, winner of the National A.A.U. 20-mile run in Philadelphia in 1932, led 21 entrants over a sweltering, 18½-mile course over Baltimore streets. He also holds the Jewish marathon championship, which he won in 1935 at Tel Aviv.

The team championship, decided on the basis of the three best finishers, was won by the Millrose A.A. of New York, which placed runners second, fifth and seventh for a total of 14 points.

Running for Millrose were Louis Balg, who finished only 1.3 minutes behind the winner; John Kernan, fifth with 2:09:19; and Mike O'Hara, seventh in 2:11:38.

Lou Gregory, also of the Millrose club, four time national champion, failed to finish.

The Boston A.A. placed runners third and fourth, as Ted Wood beat John D. Sample to the wire by 18 seconds in 2:03:14.

San Francisco Leads 3 to 2 in Playoffs

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7 (AP)—The champion San Francisco Seals, with a one-game edge and needing only one more victory over the Oakland A's, will try to nab the Pacific Coast Baseball League Governor's Cup in Seals stadium tonight.

A doubleheader triumph over the A's, 6-3 and 4-1, last night shoved the pennant winners ahead three games to two in the finals of the post season play-off with the runners-up in the regular season.

Stranahan Wins Ft. Worth Open

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 7 (AP)—Frank Stranahan, the muscled young man from Toledo, O., had the glory but a flock of other guys pocketed the cash today as the nation's top golfers took off for Montgomery, Ala., the next stop along the tournament trail.

Stranahan, the 24-year-old amateur, finished first in Fort Worth's $10,000 open yesterday with a closing three-under-par 68 for a 72-hole total of 278, but the real winner was Jim Ferrier, Chicago professional, who finished second and grabbed off first money of $2,000.

Amateurs, you know, don't touch the cash in these tournaments.

Ferrier laid down a 70 for a total of 272, while Dick Metz of Chicago wound up with 275 on the basis of his closing 66 for third place and second money of $1,400.

Some 18 bettered par 37-71 over the 6,350-yard Glen Caden course on the final 18 holes, with the best round being that of Jimmy Demaret, the Texan who now plays out of New York. Demaret shot a 65 to put him in a seventh place tie with Byron Nelson of Toledo at 277.

Bob Hamilton and Jimmy Hines, both of Chicago, and George Fazio of Los Angeles tied for fourth place with 276. Fazio, who led at the start of the final round with 201, took a four over par on the last 18 holes.

Women Begin Play in Texas Open Tourney

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 7 (AP)—Fourteen states will be represented here today as 110 of the nation's top amateur and professional women golfers tee off in the 18-hole qualifying round of the twelfth annual Texas Women's Open.

Among the entries are Mrs. George Zaharias, Denver, Colo., national amateur champion; Betty Jameson, San Antonio; Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth; Helen Dettweiler, Indio, Calif.; Dot Kieley, Los Angeles; Mrs. Betty Mims White, Dallas; Elizabeth Hicks, Long Beach, Calif.; Mary Agnes Wall, Menominee, Mich.; Grace Lenox, Newington, Conn.; Hope Seignior, Greensboro, N.C.; Mrs. C. H. Wilcox, Miami, Fla.; and Beverly Hanson, Fargo, N.D.

Today's 32 low scorers will enter the championship play-off Saturday.

Johnson's Condition Is "Very Critical"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Walter Johnson, famous baseball pitcher, was reported in "very critical" condition today by attendants at Georgetown Hospital.

The former strikeout king, now 58, under treatment for a brain tumor since last April, had shown some improvement recently. However, he "took a turn for the worse" last night, attendants said, and members of his family were called to his bedside.

ARMY MAN KILLS WIFE IN MISTAKE FOR A BURGLAR

Whispers Warning, Fires at Form at Window, Then Finds She Also Had Left Bed.

ARLINGTON, Va., Oct. 7 (AP)—"Honey, there's someone in here." With that whispered warning from his wife, Army Lt. Dean M. Bressler, 26 years old, slipped quietly out of bed early yesterday morning, mindful that police had been hunting a night prowler in the neighborhood.

Bressler pulled a revolver from a dresser drawer, turned and fired once across the dark room at a form dimly outlined at the bedroom window. Then he snapped on the light.

On the floor near the window lay his 23-year-old wife, Margaret, who also had left her bed. She was fatally wounded. Dr. W. C. Weiburn, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

The Bresslers were married in 1944 on the day he graduated from West Point. They have an 18-month-old son. Bressler is a veteran of the Battle of the Bulge. She formerly was a professional model. She was expecting another child.

$58,000 CLAIM ON ESTATE OF MRS. MARTIN SHAUGHNESSY

A claim for $58,000 was filed in Probate Court today by Charles W. Aude, 3950A Palm street, an accountant and business adviser, against the estate of Mrs. Martin Shaughnessy for services as an investment counselor and accountant from Feb. 1, 1936, to Oct. 2, 1945.

Aude said as a result of his services, the net worth of Mrs. Shaughnessy's investment portfolio was raised from $21,851 in 1936 to $441,737 in October, 1945, when she died. He said he also performed services for the Martin Shaughnessy Trust, of which Mrs. Shaughnessy was principal beneficiary, and was paid $100 a month.

Although Mrs. Shaughnessy allegedly had promised him additional compensation, Aude said he never has received any. He estimated the reasonable value of his services to have been $300 a month. Mrs. Shaughnessy's husband was owner of the old Lindell Hotel on the present site of the Stix, Baer & Fuller store and was head of a distilling company.

Two Persons Killed in Auto Accidents

Two persons were killed yesterday in automobile accidents in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

They were Mrs. Laura Bossinger, 4601 Botanical avenue, and Arthur H. Meyer, a farmer living on Patterson road near Highway 140, St. Louis County.

Mrs. Bossinger was struck by a machine in front of 916 South Kingshighway. The driver, Arch Elmer Albert, an employee of the city, was pronounced dead at City Hospital. Albert was released on bond.

Meyer was killed when the automobile he was driving turned over after side-swiping another machine on Highway 66 at New Halls Ferry road, St. Louis County.

The driver of the other automobile, N. A. Dungan of Belle Vernon, near New Halls Ferry road, and three passengers were not injured.

James Bromelsick of Route 12, Kirkwood, suffered head injuries and a fractured right elbow yesterday when he was struck by an automobile as he was walking along Highway 66 near Eureka in St. Louis County.

The driver of the machine did not stop. Bromelsick, 74 years old, was taken to St. Louis County Hospital.

Donald Smith, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Captain Smith, 2013 North Ninth street, suffered head injuries yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Illinois State Highway Patrol Sgt. Wilson Schultz of Jerseyville.

Police said Schultz, who was driving a patrol car to Sportsman's Park to see the World Series baseball game, told them the boy ran against the rear fender of the machine as it passed in front of his home. The child was taken to City Hospital.

6 Hurt In Collision

Six men were injured, one seriously, in a head-on collision of automobiles at a curve on Illinois Route 3 near the Washburn Railroad roundhouse at Brooklyn, on the East Side, shortly before midnight last night.

The man seriously injured was Arthur Ritz, 1040 Third street, Venice, who with three East St. Louisans, all A. T. O. N. Railroad freight yard employees at Venice, was driving north on the way to work. He is in St. Mary's Hospital with internal injuries and a fractured jaw. His companions, all in Christian Hospital, East St. Louis, with cuts and bruises, were John Budik Sr., 615 North Eighty-sixth street; Clarence Fisher, 809A Summit avenue, and Mike Renick, 630 North Sixth street.

In the southbound machine were two St. Louis Negroes, on their way home from the Harlem Night Club in Brooklyn. The driver, David Thomas, 3038 Dickson street, suffered a dislocated left hip and Eugene Thompson, 3214A Chouteau avenue, cuts and bruises. Both were taken to Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

C. P. SKOURAS OFFERS PAR FOR OLD BONDS

Charles P. Skouras, West Coast theater magnate and former St. Louis theater operator, has offered to buy at par and of the $4,900,000 worth of outstanding bonds of the Missouri Theater Building and Ambassador Theater Building which he and his brothers guaranteed at the time of their issue.

The offer was made to purchase any or all of the bonds at 100 cents on the dollar. The original issues, underwritten by the S. W. Strauss Co., went into default in 1932 and the buildings were taken over by bondholders' committees on foreclosure in 1934.

Two separate companies were organized to operate the two buildings and bondholders were given income bonds and voting trust certificates representing their shares in the ownership of the properties. Skouras's offer was for both certificates and bonds now outstanding. The voting trust agreement and the bonds mature in 1948.

The two operating companies have identical boards of directors, members of which are Thomas L. Farrington, William T. Nardin, Walter W. Smith, Rhodes E. Cave, Sidney Baer and Lucius B. Morse. Clarence M. Turley is secretary-treasurer and manager for both companies.

Leases of the Ambassador Theater, Seventh and Locust streets, and of the Missouri Theater at Grand boulevard and Locust streets, both expire on Oct. 31 of this year and management of both concerns are anxious to learn what party they will have to deal with in negotiating new leases, Turley said.

The units of bond and voting trust certificates now held in lieu of the original bonds have been quoted in over-the-counter markets at from 85 to 92 cents on the dollar in recent months.

Skouras started his career in St. Louis in 1908 as an immigrant boy in a hotel dining room. With his brothers he formed Skouras Brothers Enterprises to operate a chain of local theaters. His sizeable fortune was greatly reduced in the depression of the 1930s but he recouped his losses later in New York and Hollywood and is now president of National Theaters Corporation which operates a chain of first-run houses throughout the nation.

ONE KILLED, ONE HURT IN PLANE CRASH NEAR LIVINGSTON, ILL.

Charles C. Baker, Hillsboro, Ill., was instantly killed and his companion, William Klaxon, 17-year-old Litchfield (Ill.) High School student, was injured yesterday when a plane piloted by Baker crashed near the W-L-S Airport near Livingston, Ill.

Some 3500 spectators at an air show at the field saw the plane crash as Baker attempted the second of two barrel rolls less than 50 feet off the ground. The plane, a Navy trainer, was not a part of the show, officials said. Klaxon was taken to St. Francis Hospital at Litchfield where he was said to be suffering from head injuries. Baker, 26, was a garage mechanic and former Navy flyer.

LIGHT SMOKE PALL IN CITY

Light smoke limited the visibility this morning in St. Louis to one mile, and to two miles at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Meteorologist Harry F. Walgren said light winds apparently carried the smoke over the city from the East Side.

St. Louis's last smoke pall, classified as moderate, when visibility was nine-sixteenths of a mile, was last Aug. 22. Walgren said weather stations throughout the Midwest reported smoke or light fog this morning, but there were two inches of snow on the ground at Denver.

Boy, 3, Burned by Matches. Michael Webb, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Webb, 5610 Lotus avenue, suffered severe burns yesterday when his pajamas became ignited while he was playing with matches in the living room of his home, his parents reported to police. He was taken to DePaul Hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

STEELS, ASSORTED STOCKS TAKEN IN LARGE VOLUME

Dealings Slacken After Fairly Active Period and Declines Reduced but Losses Many.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Selected recoveries, principally in steels, brightened the stock market a shade today although many leaders faltered and nothing resembling vigor was present during the session.

Losses running to 2 or more points predominated after a fairly active opening. Timid support arrived by midday and extreme declines were reduced or converted into advances. Dealings slowed appreciably and top marks were cut in most cases at the close with losses plentiful.

Ahead at the last were Youngstown Sheet, Bethlehem, General Motors, Goodyear, United States Rubber, Boeing, American Telephone, Electric Power and Light, General Electric, Union Carbide, Johnson & Johnson, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Railway and Standard Oil (N.J.).

Of the 955 issues traded 462 issues closed lower, 279 higher and 214 unchanged. There were 82 new 1946 lows but no new highs.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed down .1 of a point at 61.7.

Sales were 960,000 shares compared with 920,000 shares last Friday. Among casualties were Chrysler, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, International Harvester, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, United States Gypsum, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and Texas Co. Philip Morris was up better than 2 on merger sales in the wake of a boost in cigarette prices. Reynolds Tobacco edged upward.

Commission houses attributed cautious buying partly to the belief of some customers the recent drying up of liquidation meant that the list may have already touched bottom and was due for a good technical revival. Skeptics regarding the business outlook, price controls and labor-management disputes, it was added, still were numerous and these either stood aside or continued to trim commitments.

Trend On the Curb. On the upside in the curb were Cities Service and Pantepec. Miller, Wohl, Solar Aircraft, Textron and Airon.

SEC compilation estimated sales by 955 corporations, mostly manufacturers, amounted to $12,800,000,000 in the second quarter of 1946, against $10,800,000,000 for the same time in the first three months.

This was an increase of 18 per cent. Largest expansion was made by producers of automobiles, electrical supplies and equipment. Market followers noted the Wall Street Journal carries which indicated lending policies of the nation's commercial banks were becoming more conservative in view of rising inventories in the hands of industry, labor troubles, material scarcities and the recent slump in securities quotations. Most banks, it was found, in making loans to the wholesale and retail trade, were requiring more detailed information regarding current supplies of merchandise and goods on order.

Day's Leaders. In the following list are found the sales, closing prices and net changes of the 15 most active stocks traded in the New York Stock Exchange today.

SAVINGS BONDS SALES GREATER THAN REDEMPTIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Sales of Government savings bonds during 1946 reached a total of $5,874,000,000, according to figures released today by the Treasury Department. The total sales for the year to date are $12,800,000,000, compared with $10,800,000,000 for the same time last year. The Treasury also reported that redemptions of savings bonds during 1946 totaled $4,800,000,000, compared with $4,000,000,000 for the same time last year.

The Treasury plans an intensified drive to sell savings bonds for the period from Oct. 11 to Dec. 31—America's day to Pearl Harbor day.

U.S. Officials Point to Iceland Base Agreement as Example to Reds on Dardanelles Negotiations

Americans Didn't Get What They Wanted, but They Applied No Pressure on Iceland's Government and Permission to Use Civilians on Airfields Safeguards Interests.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP).

OFFICIALS expressed belief today that this country's main strategic interests will be served by the limited air base agreement won from Iceland, despite Communist-led insistence that American military personnel must go.

Diplomatic authorities were not too pleased with what they consider at least a partial triumph for Soviet foreign policy working through international Communism. But they were quick to point out the example which the outcome of the Washington-Reykjavik negotiations could set for the approaching show-down between Russia and Turkey over the Dardanelles.

The United States has never made any secret of its hope for some type of military base on Iceland's war-developed Keflavik air port.

However, in an internal political fight that raged for months, Icelandic Communist spokesmen opposed the opposition to any such arrangement and found wide support for their views among the traditionally pacifist-minded population.

Terms of Agreement.

Thus when the struggle reached its climax Saturday, the Althing, Iceland's Parliament, voted 32 to 19, in favor of an agreement that included these main terms:

All United States military personnel, remnants of the one-time powerful forces which operated in the island during the war, must leave within six months.

Thereafter, only civilians may remain at Keflavik, although United States military planes as well as commercial craft may use the field.

It was the fact American civilians will be permitted to maintain the strategically important airport which led officials to feel that United States interests will be served by the agreement.

By the same token, these authorities cite the willingness of this country to accept the less-than-desired Icelandic decision as an example of peaceful foreign policy operating at a time when Russia is repeating its demands on Turkey.

The plain implication is that the United States will point with some measure of pride to the manner in which it came to terms with the Reykjavik Government, without the application of pressure in any form.

Turks Pass Along Terms. In this connection, it was learned that the Turkish Government called in British and American representatives in Ankara only three or four days ago and formally communicated to them the text of Russia's 10-day-old renewed demand for a share in military control of the straits.

While London and Washington may decide this week on what specific new step they will take in the Dardanelles issue, diplomats said there is no doubt that both will reaffirm publicly their opposition to Russian bases or military forces along the Dardanelles or elsewhere in Turkey.

In some respects the strategic importance of Iceland to the United States is as great as that of the Dardanelles to Russia.

Iceland is the easternmost terminal of an Arctic defense line extending from Nome, Alaska. It is in the latter area that Adm. John H. Towers last week announced plans to install a great new naval base.

Furthermore, Iceland is almost halfway between the Moscow area of the Soviet Union and the concentrated industrial section of the American east coast.

Turkish President and Premier Make Inspection Trips.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 7 (AP)—Turkey's President and Premier traveled on separate inspection tours today while, it was reported, finishing touches were being put on the Government's reply to Russia's second demand for joint control of the Dardanelles.

President Inonu left Ankara for southern Turkey and reports from Ankara said he was going to Merzin on the Aegean Sea.

Premier Recep Peker, accompanied by Minister of National Defense Cemil Cahit Toydemir, was reported entering Thrace, where Turkey joins Bulgaria and has heavy military concentrations.

The tours followed reports of Russian activity along the Turkish border.

B-29 Flight Showed Air Lines Travel Over the Arctic Feasible, Crewman Says

The Army Superfortress Pacusan Dreamboat on Payne Field outside Cairo, Egypt, where it landed early yesterday after a flight from Honolulu.

Plane Negotiates 9500 Miles From Honolulu to Cairo in 39½ Hours.

By MAX BOYD

CAIRO, Oct. 7 (AP)

COMMUNICATIONS OFFICER LT. COL. F. J. SHANNON of the Superfortress Pacusan Dreamboat, which flew nonstop over the Arctic Circle from Honolulu to Cairo, said today that commercial air service over the top of the world was practicable from a communications standpoint.

The B-29 landed at Payne Field in the desert near Cairo at 9:57 a.m. (1:57 a.m. St. Louis time) yesterday—39 hours, 36 minutes after the takeoff in Hawaii on its flight to test equipment in polar weather. The distance, covered was given today as 9500 statute miles (10,925 statute miles) as was first announced.

Lt. Col. Shannon, called back to Army service especially for the test flight from his job as engineer for Radio Station WCAU in Philadelphia, said high radio frequencies were blocked out repeatedly by sunspot flares, but asserted: "If commercial airways decide to use this region as an air route, I believe they could have successful communications with a few well-placed low frequency radio stations."

He pointed out in an interview that the shortest distance between many population centers was across the northern wastes.

Col. C. S. (Bill) Irvine of St. Paul, Neb., pilot of the big four-engine plane and commander of its 10-man crew, maintained that the 240-mile-an-hour trip had proved the ability of the B-29 to "defend the United States over any part of the world."

The Dreamboat had been stripped even of de-icing equipment to carry a heavier fuel load and had exhausted all except 400 gallons of its 13,000-ton gallon supply by the end of the trip.

However, Irvine told reporters the United States Army's new B-36 bomber could have made the same flight with a bomb load.

"The B-36 was designed for a range of 10,000 miles with a load," he explained, "while the B-29 has a range with load of 7000 miles."

Irvine said the flight had shown the magnetic North Pole to be about 200 miles closer to the geographical North Pole than scientists had believed. When the plane passed north of the presumed magnetic pole, its magnetic compasses, instead of pointing south pointed toward the geographical pole.

(In London, Sir Harold Spender said the flight was a triumph for the geographical pole.)

Possible Use of Transpolar Path In War Demonstrated by Army

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP).

ARMY AIR FORCE strategists have demonstrated in the flight of a Superfortress their theory that the best route for air war between continents is over the transpolar path.

Gen. Carl Spaatz, A.A.F. commander, commenting yesterday on the 9500-mile nonstop trip of the B-29 Pacusan Dreamboat between Hawaii and Egypt by way of the Arctic, made two points:

1. The operation proved "the feasibility of a flight across the polar wastes by properly equipped aircraft."

2. It provided "valuable information on navigational, engineering, communications, weather, fuel consumption and physical endurance problems."

"Laboratory Experiment." A.A.F. officials hastened to point out that the flight was entirely in the nature of a laboratory experiment, to learn the things to which Spaatz referred.

The Pacusan Dreamboat, they explained, was not "combat conditioned." Its 38½ tons of fuel would have allowed for no armament or bombs, certainly not a package simulating the size of an atomic bomb.

Although it was not a tactical mission, it did afford a chance to try out the polar route theory emphasized in recent months by high ranking air officers, including Spaatz.

These airmen have been interested in the route's possibilities not only for present-day aircraft but future super-range guided missiles. However, their concern today is with existing or immediately projected aircraft, the weapons with which any war in the near future probably would be fought. They note that the route can be just as feasible for troop-carrying aircraft bound on invasion missions as for bomb-toting planes.

The B-29 type used for the Honolulu-Cairo trip is actually obsolescent although not yet obsolete. Other bombers so great as to dwarf the Superfortress in size, range and load-carrying ability already are on the drawing boards or actually airborne.

These planes presumably can make hemisphere-leaping flights like the Pacusan Dreamboat and have ample space left for bombs.

In the meantime, the "staging" technique used during World War II appears to offer a practical interim method. American air bases in the Alaskan area are to be expanded. Strategists comment, however, that this does not necessarily mean large numbers

Yugoslav Trial Accusation Is Denied by Pope

Pontiff States He Never Approved Forced Conversions in Country.

By JOHN P. MCKNIGHT

CASTLE GANDOLFO, Oct. 7 (AP).

POPE PIUS XII denied yesterday that he ever had approved "forced conversions" to Catholicism in Yugoslavia, as charged by the prosecution at the trial in Zagreb of Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac on war crimes charges.

The Pope described the trial itself as "most sad."

At the same time the Pope declared that the loudest proponents of "tolerance" and "freedom of conscience" were often the quickest on gaining power, to oppress Catholics. He did not mention Russia or the Soviet system by name, but these remarks generally were interpreted as being directed at Communism.

The Pontiff's assertions were contained in a speech to the members of the Sacred Roman Rota, the high church court whose origin dates far back in the history of Catholicism. He spoke at the summer apostolic palace here, 13 miles from Rome.

Makes Emphatic Denial.

Referring to allegations by the Zagreb court that he had approved forced conversions, the Pontiff said emphatically:

"We have the right and the duty to reject an accusation so false."

Archbishop Stepinac, 48-year-old head of the Roman Catholic church in Yugoslavia, is on trial on charges of collaboration with the Germans and the terrorist Ustashi organization of the Croatian puppet regime. Prosecution witnesses testified yesterday that Catholic priests armed with pistols set out to convert orthodox Serbs.

The Pope, to "document properly" his denial, cited an aside memoir delivered Jan. 25, 1942, by the Vatican secretary of state to the Yugoslav delegation to the Holy See.

He said the aside memoir was prompted by an inquiry from the legation about the many conversions to Catholicism of "Croat dissidents" in Yugoslavia. The inquiry recognized "expressly," the Pontiff declared, "that neither the

Communism Works in Yenan; Everyone Has Job and Food, Reforms Have Popular Support

Living Standards Are Still Low, but No One Starves—China's Ancient Evils of Landlordism and Political Corruption Largely Eliminated.

By A. T. STEELE

YENAN, Oct. 7.

YOU do not have to stay long in this Communist area capital to realize that in the field of social reform the Chinese Communists are a dynamic and progressive influence. Admittedly, Yenan is the show window and laboratory of the Communist program. Admittedly, the program may not work as effectively in urban areas and in regions where Communist party membership is less concentrated. But one would have to be blind and deaf to say with candor that the system is not working here.

Yenan, with its 28,000 inhabitants, is strung out along nearly 10 miles of the Yen river, which has cut a ravine several hundred feet deep through the yellow loess overlay of northwest China. Two-thirds of the population live in caves excavated from yellow bluffs on both sides of the river.

On the narrow valley floor are fields of millet, corn, cabbage and peanuts, interspersed with clusters of dwellings and small shops. The old walled city, laid in ruins by Japanese bombing raids, shelters only a few hundred of the town's population.

Yenan and the surrounding area of northern Shensi province have always ranked among the poorest and most backward regions of China. The abject poverty of the people, their completely agrarian character and their low standard of literacy made then good prospects for reform when the Communists took over in 1936, after their long march from Kiangsu province.

There Is Food for All. In this bleak setting, the blockade Communists have succeeded to an amazing extent in eliminating many of the outstanding evils which have made China the despair of reformers. Yenan is still very poor and backward by Western standards. But today there is no starvation. There are no beggars. There is work for every one. There is food for all.

Furthermore, the time-honored vices of "squeeze and corruption" have been largely eliminated. The standard of health is high, and medical facilities, though meager, are available to every one. Landlordism and other forms of economic exploitation have been greatly reduced by what must be described as revolutionary, and in some cases drastic, methods. Taxes and interest rates are low.

Yenan merchants seem to be prospering, although the growth of business is doubtless due partly to the expansion of Yenan since it became the Communist capital. The Communists assert that less than 10 per cent of Yenan's population—chiefly the landlord element—is living on a lower standard than before they took over. The remainder of the population is probably better off, although the general standard of living is still appallingly low.

Pitifully lacking in modern equipment and technical personnel, the Communists have concentrated their attention on improving the livelihood of the people with the limited materials at hand. Except for the generally healthy appearance of the population and the absence of beggars, rickshaws, prostitutes and silk-robed compadres (native agents for foreign establishments), Yenan looks outwardly much like any backwoods Chinese town. Donkeys and horses ply the streets, peasants till the fields with primitive implements, and living conditions are the simplest.

Beneath the surface, however, you find many innovations. In tiers of caves, overlooking the walled town, are to be found hospitals, nurseries, schools, co-operative workshops and even art exhibits. Although industrial development has been encouraged to the utmost, the shortage of machinery and other forms of eco-

Business Outlook

By John R. Steelman

(J. A. Livingston is on a short vacation. Substituting for him today as guest columnist is John R. Steelman, director of Reconversion and Stabilization and one of President Truman's intimate advisers.)

JUST the other day in this column J. A. Livingston made a point that all of us should be thinking about these days. He was discussing the problems business men are having in trying to fill industrial pipelines and balance their inventories in order to get the sustained, high-level production of the finished goods we all want and need. Then he added this: "Planned rates of production and outstanding orders for goods are based on a demand which in part is nonrecurrent and limited." As guest columnist for today, I am going to take that text and expound on it a little.

During the busy 13 months that have gone by since Japan surrendered, the whole country has been concentrating on getting civilian production into high gear again. By and large, the country has done a remarkably good job.

The proof that the country has done a good job is right on the record, plain for anybody to read. Civilian employment today is at an all-time high during either war or peace. Only about two million of our 60 million civilian labor force are unemployed. Income payments to individuals are at the highest rate ever and so are business profits after taxes.

"Since all this is true, I hear somebody say, 'What are we worrying about?' What are business men behaving with such caution? Why are labor leaders apprehensive? Why has the stock market taken a number of dips?"

For the answer I'd like to get back to my text: Sustained high-level production can come only as the result of sustained high demand. The question many of us are asking ourselves these days is, "Will demand remain high? Will it be sufficient to absorb the huge flow of finished goods we are going to get very soon?"

Today we are producing food, clothing, washing machines, electric irons, vacuum cleaners, and many other consumer goods at rates far above those ever achieved before—in war or peace. The production of such things as houses, automobiles and refrigerators is increasing monthly, and should reach capacity levels some time in 1947.

Next Problem: Consumer Demand. The task that faced us at the end of the war was the turnaround from war goods to peace goods—setting up new assembly lines and organizing the flow of parts and materials. Then came the task of production—increasing the output of finished civilian goods. The first task is practically finished, although some shortages are going to plague us for a good while to come.

Now we see that a new problem will confront us as soon as the finished goods really start rolling—the problem of consumer demand. Will Americans buy automobiles, houses and refrigerators when these are available as eagerly as they currently are buying food, clothing and consumer services? In other words, will total demand slacken off in relation to supply, or will it keep up with production?

Recent hesitation in the business world has been ascribed to international tension, to fear of another round of wage demands, to worries over trends in corporate profits—especially the profits of the railroads, and to concern over inflation. I'd like to add another reason: concern over future consumer demand.

The Real Production Ceiling.

Some business men still feel discouraged about lags in production. This is partly because there has been one delay after another due to parts shortages, skilled labor shortages, or labor-management disputes. It is also because many business men and investors got ahead of themselves in anticipating reconversion and underestimated the size of the task. But many other business men, I am sure, feel uncertain about what the demand for the products will be six months or a year from now.

The present rate of production is based in part on a backlog of demand for goods that were not produced during the war. But it is also based on higher employment and larger total income than ever before. Only our physical capacity to consume puts the real ceiling on our business market.

A man can only eat so much, can only wear so many shoes, and can use so many automobiles. It would be possible to produce more shoes and automobiles than we as a nation can physically consume. But automobile manufacturers can also make air conditioning equipment and airplanes. Business ingenuity can shift the production machine to new products and thereby tap new markets.

Wants and needs must be transformed into new products.

A Just Price Only Should be Paid For a Funeral

One should not take the appearance of a funeral establishment as the measure of what might have to be paid, but you may be sure of this:

A strictly first class Mortuary, because of the larger volume of business, presents lower prices than elsewhere. Comparisons are easily made.

It is suggested that you inspect the offerings by this Mortuary before deciding on where honor may best be given.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Barred From Bar Vote

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The St. Louis Bar Association, in my judgment, is least qualified to pass on questions of integrity, impartiality and fitness of Circuit Judges, when gauged by the standards it demands in the selection of its own membership. One qualification is that no person having the skin color of "blood" identifying him as a Negro shall be eligible for membership, all other qualifications notwithstanding.

There has been but one instance of a Negro lawyer being recommended for permanent disbarment in the history of St. Louis. This recommendation, incidentally, was made by a Negro commissioner appointed by our Supreme Court to inquire into charges laid against the alleged miscreant. A pretty good record, I would say, touching qualifications on fitness for membership in any organization assuming to represent all lawyers.

Along with nearly 50 other practicing Negro lawyers, I was not permitted to cast a ballot in the recent judicial poll of the local association. The 500-vote poll certainly did not speak for us. Nor, I suspect, did it speak for the 600 other lawyers not included, many of whose clients come from the wrong side of the railroad tracks.

How can the St. Louis Bar Association give collective judgment on impartiality, temperament and integrity, while within its own framework exists racialism resulting in the collective practice of discrimination of the same sort forbidden in our national Constitution?

DAVID M. GRANT.

Veterans Evicted

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We are two veterans who have lived in a flat three months. Now we have received an eviction notice.

The wife of one of us is expecting a baby in March. Before her marriage she was a patient at a convalescent home for four years and left a week before her marriage.

Now that we have fixed all the screens and lights, wall-papered, painted, debugged and cleaned out all the filth, we are told to move.

You would think in a place as large as St. Louis, we could find a five-room apartment or hotel and settle down and live a normal life after four years in the service. In the war overseas we could at least fight back, but now our hands are tied.

TWO VETERANS.

In Service With Simpson

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Since I've come back to St. Louis, I've been very much interested in the congressional campaign between Walter C. Ploeser and Henry W. Simpson. I saw Simpson working under Japanese bombings in the Solomon area in the South Pacific while Ploeser was working in Washington to make it easier for the money people to get better contracts out of Uncle Sam.

Simpson was the kind of officer a fellow respected, not because he took so much but because he was liked and was trusted. He was the intelligence officer for our fighter squadron. When things got tough, Simpson was a good man to have around. He did his part and more, getting us parts and seeing that the boys were taken care of as far as chow and a place to sleep went.

He wasn't like a lot of officers. When he made a promise to do something for you, he kept it, whether it was legal troubles or financial difficulties. At the same time, all of us knew that we had to do our job because Simpson never forgot his responsibility. He knew he had a duty to do.

There are things about a war which make you see what a guy's made out of. I think Henry W. Simpson has got the right stuff to make a good Congressman, and every veteran in the Twelfth District owes it to himself and the people to get out and put Simpson in Congress.

FRANCIS WILLIAM ANKELMANN.

Courtesy Remembered

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Courtesy and consideration are not just a memory.

This fact was evidenced when I lost my streetcar pass-case on a Delmar bus with a pass for the current week in it. The finder notified me by telephone, refused to divulge his name or to accept a reward, and mailed the case to me at his own expense.

The finder works at the "Small Arms." I am hoping he will see this letter and accept my thanks again for his great kindness.

A. M. L.

Shangri-La, U. S. A.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The professional veteran has irked me since I returned from service in the Orient, where I gladly became "Mr." again last November.

I could cite several cases in which I personally know veterans are drawing 30 bucks a week and admit it's the gravy train.

Don't get me wrong! There's nothing too good for the bona fide cases of service-connected disability.

But what more does anyone who has seen life in other parts of the world desire than a chance to live his own life in these United States, which, with its many faults, is still a Shangri-La compared with other countries?

OVER FOUR YEARS' SERVICE.

For a Review of Bases

An air base agreement with Iceland, which has every appearance of being satisfactory both to the United States and the small North Atlantic island, has been ratified by the Icelandic Parliament. All American military personnel will leave in six months, their places to be filled by United States civilian personnel. Our military planes, as well as civilian commercial aircraft, will be authorized to use the base. Chief opposition to the agreement, which was approved 32 to 19, came from 10 Communist members.

This is a reminder that the base question is still open in Panama where the stake of the United States is much greater than in Iceland. Early in the war, when it became necessary to take every possible precaution in the defense of the Panama Canal, the United States and the Republic of Panama entered into an agreement whereby this country set up 83 bases on soil of Panama. All but 11 of these have been returned. Even so, the United States was recently accused of "imperialistic tactics" by a Panamanian Deputy. After his intense appeal, his chamber asked for immediate return of the handful of bases remaining in United States hands.

This question of Panama bases needs to be discussed afresh by both countries and the agreement renegotiated. It is to the interest of Panama no less than the United States that the changed climate of international relations be taken into full account.

The contention of the Panama Assembly that V-J day represented a peace covenant and that the limit of one year for use has been passed is hardly tenable. Shooting stopped on V-J day, but no final settlement was made. The Peace Conference is only now drawing covenants with Italy and the German satellites. Many wartime laws are still in force in the United States. We have not yet recognized the end of the war, and for the express purpose of being able to deal with the still-present emergency.

Fortunately, the Government of Panama has said that it would be willing to review the base question. Our envoy, Gen. Frank T. Hines, should make the most of the opportunity. Obviously, we do not now need all we once had, but a few could be key spots in hemispheric defense.

It takes only a backward look to see how our handling of our wartime defense bases in Panama contrasts with the establishment of the Republic of Panama in the first place. When Colombia objected to the canal zone treaty proposed by the Theodore Roosevelt administration, the Panama area was induced to secede (1903). The new Government was at once recognized by the United States and within a month it negotiated the treaty which Colombia had rejected. The first Roosevelt was blunt enough about it. "I took the canal zone," he later said, "and let Congress debate."

Out of this imperialistic episode came charges of falsehood against Roosevelt by the New York World and the Government's counter libel suit against Joseph Pulitzer and two of the World's editors. The suit was dropped, but in 1921, in the Harding administration, a treaty authorizing the payment of $25,000,000 in damages to Colombia was ratified by the Senate. But the question of future military bases is not limited to Panama. Global war required the United States to work out airfield and other military base agreements with countries around the world. There was a time when the Army's Air Transport Command started planes on the Atlantic Coast, crossed over to Europe and Africa by at least three routes, and proceeding east, crossed India and the Far East and returned to the United States via the Pacific.

One of the notable engineering achievements of the war was the construction of the Army Airbase on the Ascension Island in the South Atlantic between Brazil and Liberia. The British, who own the island, said it would take three years to build an airfield on the volcanic pile. Nine months after first supplies were unloaded the first plane set its wheels down on the runway. Thousands of men and thousands of tons of materials were flown that way to the fronts. On the Azores, in the Pacific, in Arabia, in Egypt, in Morocco—in many other places are airfields and defense bases built with American funds to help win World War II. Obviously, not all should be held. It would be a mistake to try to keep them all, even if the nations which agreed to their construction desired it. But each one which is still in our hands should be reviewed and considered on its merits, in the light of the post-war world.

It would be folly and waste to do less.

The New Yorker Started Something

When the New Yorker did the brilliant journalistic service of devoting one entire issue to John Hersey's report on what happened at Hiroshima, it started something. Now comes the Book-of-the-Month Club, through its president, Harry Scherman, to say:

We have decided to give "Hiroshima" to our members, instead of selling it because we know we can distribute many more copies that way, and we want to do our part in giving this book the widest possible dissemination.

If the lackadaisical public is not finally aroused to the dangers of atomic warfare, it will not be for lack of some earnest efforts to bring these dangers to its notice.

Hoodwink, Cajole, Etc.

American Action, Inc., seems to think that now is the time for all good men to drag out a thick wide brush and paint the political opposition Red. A Washington dispatch from Edward A. Harris says this new organization warns us all of serfdom if an "organized majority can hoodwink, cajole, mislead, promise and drive enough voters" the wrong way, namely, to the left.

Probably something like American Action was inevitable, as an organized reply from far on the other side of the political fence to labor's PAC. And American Action seems well organized, with a reported war chest of $750,000. Mr. Harris says the group is something like the old Liberty League and America First. It is "for America," and for Congressman Clare Hoffman of Michigan, Senator William Langer of North Dakota and John W. Bricker for President.

In order to push this exemplary slate, American Action represents itself as the chief defense against a "Socialist-Communist state." So it charges that "you and your children will not only be on the road to serfdom, you will be at the very gates of servitude" unless, presumably,

It's Hoffman, Langer, Bricker and American Action.

"Hoodwink, cajole, mislead, promise and drive," say these checkbook patriots. Can't they hear the echo?

ICC Safety or None

An Illinois grand jury which investigated the recent Naperville train wreck did an excellent job. Finding no basis for personal indictments in the mass of possible causes, it used the opportunity to recommend safety measures which could have averted the disaster. Wider spacing between fast trains, brake tests before all runs, radar or other automatic train controls, two-way radio on passenger trains are the main ones.

However, the grand jury was impotent except as an organ of opinion. It could only convey its recommendations to the Illinois Commerce Commission. But the commission is impotent in turn, for the Interstate Commerce Commission's jurisdiction in safety, as in other major regulatory matters, is overriding.

Federal laws say so, and the courts have sustained them. The states cannot effectively require more advanced rules and devices than those prescribed by the ICC, on the theory that to do so would inevitably interfere with interstate commerce.

States which once maintained safety rules and inspections—on air brakes and locomotive headlights, for example—have necessarily yielded the field to the ICC. Hence about all the state commissions can now do for safety is to submit their own recommendations to the Federal agency. Safety on the rails must come from the ICC or not at all.

That leaves the ICC under a grave obligation to act for the protection of passengers, shippers and train crews, for the Naperville collision and too many other avoidable disasters show that its present rules are not strong enough. The ICC has repeatedly spoken with favor of the measures recommended by the Illinois grand jury and various others. But its wishes have too often taken the form of mere recommendations, which the railroads have frequently ignored.

It is obviously time for a new and higher level of minimum safety requirements by ICC order. It is encouraging that ICC's current inquiry, including the Cincinnati hearing last week, is addressed to exactly that possibility.

New Career for Missouri Mules?

In answer to charges that Tito's army is taking over UNRRA mules sent for rehabilitation uses, Director-General Fiorello H. LaGuardia suggests that the Yugoslavs have been trading the beasts among themselves for breeding purposes.

That is interesting, especially so in Missouri, U.S.A., which has certain genetic and pecuniary and sentimental interests in the mule. For, according to Missouri's experience, the mule does not breed. He is too much the unique work of art for that; he must be created anew, out of the gentle mare by the jackass, each generation. So Missouri finds, and Missouri mules are proverbial.

Of course, something in Yugoslavia may endow the mule with powers which we in Missouri know not of—perhaps the water, or the special Titoesque species of democracy. But here is a subject on which Missouri really will have to be shown.

Let the Public Speak

The adjourned Seventy-ninth Congress left a large legacy of desirable legislation for its successor to consider and high on that list is the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill with its broad provisions for medical care. That bill still lies in committee, unreported.

From the day Senator Wagner began talking health and medical care for all, the American Medical Association and kindred groups unfurled the banners and released the cries of "socialized medicine," "Communism" and "dictatorship." The National Physicians Committee for the Extension of Medical Care, whose financial backing comes from industry as well as doctors, took up the cudgels for the doctors' choice—insurance plans run by private groups.

The folly of denouncing a medical and health care plan sponsored by the Government and supported by taxation is made patent by an article in the Sunday Post-Dispatch. Comparing the proposed Wagner-Murray-Dingell plan with existing plans in England and Russia, the article indicates the relatively conservative character of the bill ducked by the last Congress. Although the British medical profession railed at the thought of Government-sponsored medicine, it should be noted it was not the Labor Government, but Winston Churchill's coalition Government, which first initiated the present program in Britain.

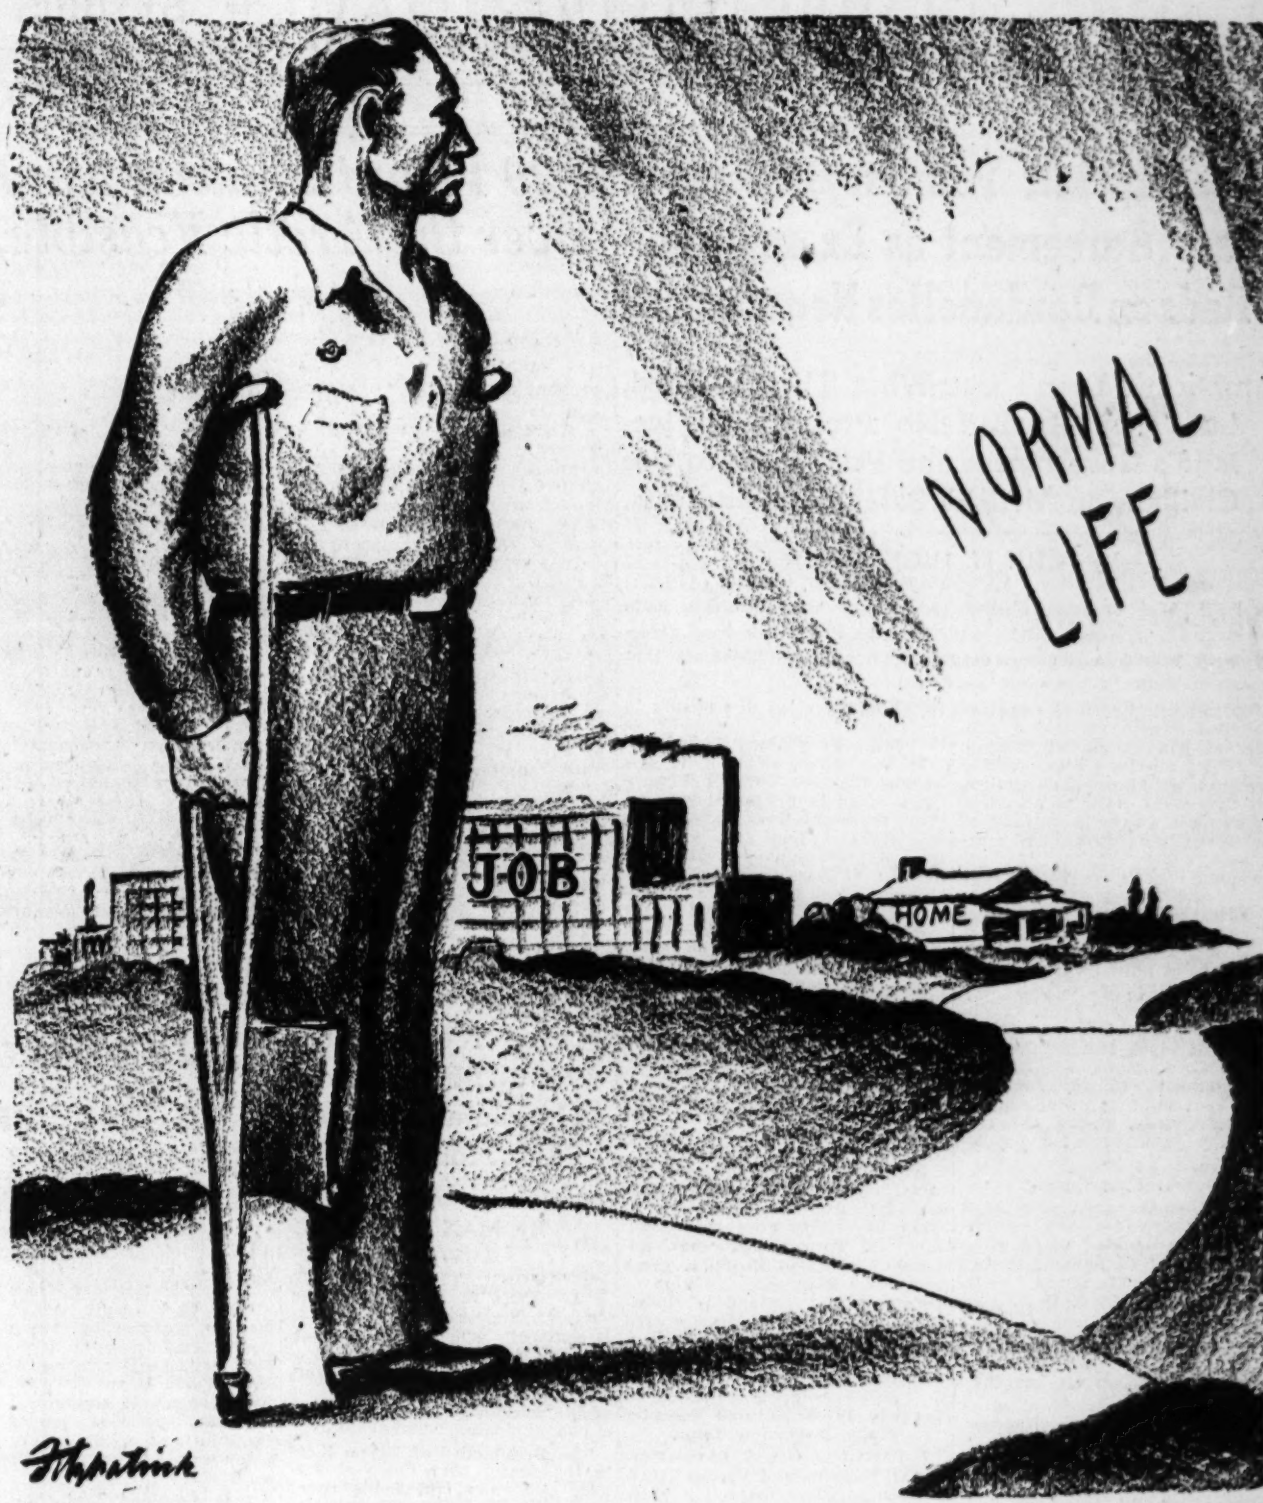

At this stage, the citizen has a role to play. If he wants a vigorous medical and health program working in his interest and not the interests of others, whether they be insurance companies or physicians, he must make his desires known. The Eightieth Congress will not be able to keep the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill or its successor on the shelf if many voices are heard from all sides at Washington.

A Dream of Fair Pacusa

The name of the Pacusan Dreamboat, which has completed its epochal flight from Honolulu to Cairo, must have been a rare pleasure to everyone who has ever dreamed of the delightful country of Pacusa, and they are as numerous as the sheep of the difficult dozer.

Pacusa, more exotic than Persia, sweeter and more familiar than Tibet, a little more languorous than the South Seas, a couple of karats up on the Golden Road to Samarkand—ah, Pacusa the enchanted! To whom does it not seem that he has dreamed of it, the very name being the tinkle of music and the brush of a soft breeze and the striking of the hour of contentment.

From these pleasant bemusings the awakening is rude. Pacusa, says the official announcement, stands for the initials of the Pacific Air Command, United States Army. There is no such place. Expunge it from your heart, and dream on it no more forever. Dream of Istanbul and Cairo, Tripoli and Bali and the Ind, Shangri-La and Oz and the Sugarand Mountains, but dream no more of Pacusa, the ultimate, and the debunked.

OPEN ROAD

When the Crowd Waxed Glad

The Mirror of Public Opinion

First World Series in 1903 also involved Boston's American League team, then called the "Beaneaters"; seats cost up to a dollar, and handlebar mustaches waxed in the bleachers; Boston won—no precedent intended; and so "the Pittsburgs felt very badly indeed."

Bertram Benedict in Editorial Research Reports

The present world series is like the first world series, played in 1903, in that the Boston team of the American League is in it. That team was then called, not the Red Sox, but the "Beaneaters." It won the 1903 series.

The National League, organized in 1876, was for a long time the only major league in baseball. The American League was formed to challenge it in 1890, establishing clubs in six of the eight National League cities. For several years the two leagues raided each other's clubs for players.

In 1903, peace was established; a national commission was created to control baseball; a series was arranged between the winners in each league to decide the baseball championship of the world. (In the following year, the National League winners, New York, refused to play the American League winners, again Boston; the world series was resumed in 1905.)

The players in 1903 seemed to be all of what the late Adolf Hitler called "Nordic" stock, if that would include the Irish also. There were no names like DiMaggio, Mel-kovich, Pelligri, Ryba, Gonzalez, Duzak, Garagiola, Grodzicki, Kurowski, Sassi, Furillo, Hermanski, Lavagetto, Lombardi, Miksis, Ramazotti, Tepic. Two umpires officiated in the 1903 world series—O'Day and Connolly.

No Women Were Present

In 1903, Boston had won easily in the American League with a final percentage of .660. Pittsburg (the name was then spelled without an "h" at the end) had won just as easily in the National League, with a .650 percentage. The Pittsburg manager was Fred Clarke, who played left field and batted second; the Boston manager was "Jimmie" Collins, who played third base, and also batted second.

Each team had an outstanding player of all time. "Hans" Wagner was shortstop for Pittsburg; he had led the National League in batting that year with .362, but was to hit only .214 in the series. "Cy" Young was the mainstay of the Boston pitching staff.

The 1903 series was for five games out of nine; betting was even when it began. It opened in Boston, and Pittsburg won by 7 to 3, with Philippe and Young the pitchers—in fact, with rain and railroad travel causing delays, these two did most of the pitching in the entire series. Admission in Boston was 50 cents for the bleachers, $1.00 for the grandstand; in Pittsburg, 50 cents for the bleachers, 75 cents for the grandstand, $1.00 for box seats.

A photograph of the grandstand at the first game showed most of the men wearing derby hats, also "handlebar" mustaches extending to points due south of the ears. No women seemed to be present. Of course, no games were played on Sundays.

The Utmost Jubilation

The series created little interest except in the two cities in which it was played. The New York Times gave each game about four inches of space, with headlines like "Baseball for Championship."

The attendance averaged 18,000 in each city, except for the last game, when threatening weather cut down the figure to 7500. Boston won the second game, Pittsburg the next two, Boston the next four.

The newspaper accounts seem incredibly stilted today. How would you like to read about the 1946 series in language like the following? (No, it is not from the scholarly Boston Transcript of that era.)

Wagner made two awful lunges to hit the ball.

The Boston "rooters" lost all control of themselves.

Parent singled to left, a splendid effort.

Three more good warm cheers came from the "rooters."

Wagner went out to Dougherty, where at the crowd waxed exceeding glad.

There was a scene of the utmost jubilation when the game ended (but) the Pittsburgs felt very badly indeed.

In 1903, the manager of the American League team in Philadelphia was one Connie Mack; the highest-paid baseball player was said to be Napoleon Lajoie of the Cleveland team. While the 1903 world series was being played, a Miss Bessie Anthony won the national women's golf championship—in a skirt that came to the tips of her shoes; and Barney Oldfield broke world automobile speed records by driving 15 miles in 14 1/2 minutes.

The Return of Some Natives

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune

Seventy native sons of Kansas City found the going tricky on a tour of the Missouri reaches that take in the southeast quarter of their "Greater City," or metropolitan area. They admitted on their safe return to the built-up section of the home of their childhood that they had lost themselves three times on a nostalgic round of various points of interest. By omitting a couple of stops and some reminiscent oratory they managed to reach the site of their society's festive dinner only 30 minutes late.

Actually it was a bus driver who got them astray on the second of the three occasions. Anxious to follow someone who knew where he was going, the driver set off in the wake of a party whose definite style of trail-blazing turned out to be the kind a party has when he is headed for his own home, for his own dinner. Two other bus drivers, following the same hopeful lead, wound up with their passengers at the same dead end.

The native son who returns to the health is invariably troubled by the deliberate misplacements, enlargements, shrinkages or eliminations that balk his memory of things and places as they were. Native sons who still hang in and around the health are supposed to do a little better at exploring it, especially if they are organized in a formal society. The Kansas Cityans explain that they still know all the landmarks, but that the roads have moved away from the landmarks. In general, it remains a good plan not to ask a native son anywhere how to get somewhere.

Lost Fortnight

THE FALL OF VALOR, by Charles Jackson. (Rinehart &amp; Co., New York.)

Charles Jackson, who jumped to fame with his first novel, "The Lost Weekend," has issued a second. This is an exciting fact in itself — because "The Lost Weekend" was a new thing. That kind of minute description of the terrors and despair of the alcoholic Don Birnam had just never been done before. And now, using the same technique — the probing, by an almost dreary repetition, so deeply into the self of a man that he stands before the reader valorless, uncontrolled, freed even from the craft of the omnipresent ego—Mr. Jackson has produced another new thing.

"It is a thing most sorrowful — nay, shocking—to expose the fall of valor in the soul." This quotation from Melville gives Jackson the painful essence of his narrative. It is, however, a narrative unfulfilled. There are tremendous possibilities here, but because of the artless repetitions and the very real lack of proportion in the development of his hero, the narrative just doesn't hold together.

Jackson divides his book into the tightly organized Aristotelian beginning, middle, and end, but it is only an organizational device. In reality, the reader is entirely unprepared for the end, and the surprise of it becomes more a device, a chapeau from one who is so uniquely gifted, who remains a writer with an uncanny and bold psychological insight.

The story itself is peculiar to these war years. John Grandin, a professor of literature, is overwrought because his age prevents him from being in the fight, and he begins to see in the young soldiers about him the beautiful blond athletes of ancient Greece. The theme of youth and war takes possession of him to the point of morbidity, so that his very marriage is shaken by it. Indeed, he finds himself in the strangely anomalous position of being a man in love with his wife but having no desire to perform his marital duties.

His wife Ethel and he silently conspire to find out why the marriage has become so arid. They therefore go away for a two-week vacation in Nantucket at a time when the moon is full and love-making a promise. Unfortunately, a Marine captain, Cliff Hausman, who is the very image of a Greek hero, appears, and John is even more completely overwhelmed by the problem of youth and war. Now, however, he is overwhelmed by his sudden recognition of what was before only a "nameless apprehension," and his discovery catapults him into ruin. He becomes another Don Birnam, a valorless man.

Yes, there is excitement, suspense, surprise, but the denouement is only as convincing as that of a detective novel in which pertinent clues can be found only in retrospect. The reader is tantalized when he puts the book down after a feverish reading—if only the author had fully embodied the cowardice of John Grandin's perverse despair!

HARRIET ZINNES.

All About Engines

THE BOYS' BOOK OF ENGINES, MOTORS AND TURBINES, by Alfred Morgan. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

Just about every conceivable kind of engine is described in this book for boys with an engineering turn of mind. It tells what engines and motors do and why. Some 150 illustrations by the author help the young experimenter to try his hand at building them. Necessary tools and materials are listed.

There is much information of general interest, as for example: automobiles in the United States emit enough carbon monoxide each year to cover 16 square miles to a depth of one mile, or 2,700,000,000,000 cubic feet.

EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER

Internal Disorder Danger to Peace

INSTEAD of promoting war with the Soviets, the Truman-Byrnes foreign policy of firmness toward Moscow is fortifying peace. It is too bad that the same cannot be said of the domestic situation.

Returning home from Paris, I feel that Americans have not yet realized that most of the current war scare now raging is bad judgment though some of it may be "planned hysteria."

In my judgment, the real danger of a Russo-American conflict does not lie in our monopoly of the atomic bomb, still less in the discords of the Paris Conference. The danger does not reside in the far more important clashes over Germany and China. Soviet imperialism, the flouting of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements, the mistreatment of the subjugated peoples behind the Iron Curtain, the arrogant threats against Turkey, do not really contain the danger of a new war—provided they are stood up to.

Danger in Weakness.

The real danger of war lay—and lies—in the weakness of the democracies and principally of the United States. For it is the nature of the Soviet system and of Russians to expand wherever and as far as they can without serious difficulty. So long as Washington and London said yes to every Soviet claim, the danger of war was large.

Democracies always seek to avoid conflict by concessions up to the point where they despair of that system. At this moment they turn tough—tougher than any autocracy can hope to be. Hitler found this out when, having been permitted to get away with murder in the Rhineland, in Austria and in Czechoslovakia, he suddenly got a declaration of war from Britain and France over his relatively harmless grab for Danzig.

Something like that would probably have happened had further Soviet claims been granted. With each new concession the Russians would have become more arrogant. Since they are notoriously bad judges of foreign peoples, when they finally met a refusal they would have endeavored to ride over it and the democracies would have countered by a sock to the Soviet jaw. War would have followed.

Halting 'Soviet Blight.'

The Truman-Byrnes policy of refusing to countenance further Soviet imperialism is not only protecting other peoples from what they politely term "the Soviet blight," it is reducing the danger of a new conflict. The sending of a naval squadron to the Dardanelles was wise statesmanship. So is our championing of the United Nations charter, our refusal to be intimidated at Paris, our insistence that the Yugoslavs cease murdering our aviators, our blunt statements that further Russian encroachments on the non-Russian world will mean trouble.

For by these acts we not only act strongly but what is equally important, we look strong.

That is why it is so depressing

MARQUIS CHILDS

Whimsy or Common Sense?

IN every session a certain number of screwball bills get dumped into the congressional hopper. These are often measures put in as a gesture to pacify some organization or pressure group, with no expectation that they will ever be seriously considered.

At first glance, a proposal that died with the 79th Congress has the look of a bit of whimsy. But in the fantastic time when we are living, this proposal may be too long come to seem merely elementary common sense.

The resolution introduced by Representative James W. Trimble of Arkansas provided for a government of the United States in the event an atomic bomb should be dropped on Washington and wipe out the President, Vice President, all the members of the Cabinet, the entire Congress and the Supreme Court. The resolution proposed a conditional amendment to be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

Under the proposed amendment, if the Government in Washington were wiped out, the first step would be for the top officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force to choose "a civilian to act as interim President." This is on the assumption, of course, that the commanders of the three services would survive and be in active command of forces in the field.

Emergency President.

The interim President is to call a meeting of the governors of all the states. The governors will then select by a majority vote one of their number to act as President, and one to act as Vice President. "Those selected by the governors shall immediately take office and serve for the unexpired portion of the terms for which the last elected President and Vice President were elected, respectively, at the site selected by a majority of the governors."

You will be able to pick it up on your television set—unless, of course, the radioactive effect of the bomb has knocked out all television and radio. The Governor of Illinois is being sworn in as President of the United States in a deep underground shelter at the capital in Springfield, which, until the war ends in victory and Washington can be restored, will be the capital of the United States.

As seen on the television screen, the faces of the newly chosen leaders of the country are tense and drawn. The words they speak are measured and solemn. This is the first time that a foreign enemy has carried war to the shores of the United States. And it is war, says the new Presi-

$20,000 IN SYMPHONY SEASON TICKETS SOLD

Campaign in Final Week—First Concert to Be Oct. 18.

Orders totaling $20,000 have been obtained so far in the season ticket campaign of the St. Louis Symphony Society. The drive, conducted by the Women's Association of the Society, enters its final week today.

About 200 members of the association are taking part in the drive. Until Saturday, season tickets may be purchased at prices as much as 50 per cent under single admission ticket prices. Tickets are on sale at campaign headquarters, room 1178, Arcade building, Eighth and Olive streets, and at the St. Louis Band Instrument Co., 918 Olive street.

Season tickets assure purchasers the same seats for every concert, eliminate waits at the box office and entitle holders to preference of seats for special programs, campaign directors pointed out.

The Symphony Orchestra, with Vladimir Golschmann conducting for the sixteenth consecutive year, will open its sixtieth season Oct. 18 and 19 in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

For the opening program, Golschmann will offer Brahms' second symphony, von Weber's overture to "Oberon," Morton Gould's "Spirituale," Debussy's prelude to "The Afternoon of a Faun" and Ravel's "Bolero."

The subscription series includes 20 pairs of concerts. There will be 20 Saturday evening performances, 10 Friday matinees and 10 Sunday matinees.

Soloists who will appear with the orchestra are: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Eugene List, Arthur Casadesu, Alexander Gainsky, Ania Dorfmann, Claudio Arrau, Mischa Elman, Isaac Stern, Zino Francescatti, Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky, Carmen Torres, Frances Yeend, Mario Lanza and Joel Berglund.

EISENHOWERS ATTEND CHURCH WITH BRITISH ROYAL FAMILY

CRATHIE, ABERDEENSHIRE, Scotland, Oct. 6 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and his family knelt in prayer yesterday with King George VI, Queen Elizabeth and the two princesses in the little parish church of Crathie, near Balmoral Castle, where the Eisenhowers are guests of the royal family. They sang hymns with the congregation in a simple country service in this colorful portion of the Scottish highlands.

The King, Queen, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, Rose and other members of the royal household sat in the four front seats. Immediately behind them were the American chief-of-staff, his wife and son, Capt. John Eisenhower.

The rest of the day was spent informally on the spacious Balmoral premises. Capt. Eisenhower Saturday night danced with the princesses at an after-dinner party in the castle ballroom.

FUNERAL TO BE WEDNESDAY FOR SISTER MARY CYRILLA

Funeral services for Sister Mary Cyrilla of the Sisters of St. Mary will be at 5:45 a.m. Wednesday from St. Mary of the Angels Mother House, 1100 Bellevue avenue, Richmond Heights. Burial will be at 3 p.m. at Old St. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

The nun, who was 72 years old, died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital of cancer. Before joining the Sisters of St. Mary 44 years ago she was Maria Beckers. She was born in Germany and had no known survivors in this country or in her homeland.

L. EDWARD LORTZ FUNERAL: FORMER IRON WORKS OFFICER

Funeral services for L. Edward Lortz, former executive vice president of the Fulton Iron Works, will be at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow from his home, 5616 Lindell boulevard. He was 82 years old and died yesterday at his home after a long illness.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rebecca E. Lortz; a daughter, Mrs. Edna MacIntyre, and three sons, Russell, Adrian and Ambrose Lortz. Burial will be in Valhalla cemetery.

WASHINGTON U. NIGHT CLASSES

Night classes at Washington University will begin tonight as scheduled, Dean Willis H. Reed said today. Opening of day classes was postponed until tomorrow because of the large number of student registrations.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

THE latest debut date to be announced is that of Miss Frances Tenney MacDonald, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacDonald, 6 Lenox place, will present her to society New Year's day at a tea dance at the Bogen Club. The hours will be from 5 to 8 o'clock. Miss MacDonald, who will be a maid of honor at the Velled Prophet ball, came here a little more than a year ago from Scarsdale, N. Y., where her parents formerly lived. She is a graduate of The Masters School, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and Bradford Junior College.

Several parties in honor of debutantes have been scheduled for the winter season. Mrs. Nelson Pope, 437 Mission court, will honor Miss Andrea Knight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Knight, 6377 Pershing avenue, at a luncheon Dec. 13. The following day Mrs. T. Middleton Lewis, 9 Wydown terrace, will have a cocktail party for Miss Marie Catherine Diebold Denny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Denny, at a luncheon Dec. 14. Guests will be invited between 5 and 7 o'clock. Mrs. Lewis returned Monday from the East, having accompanied her younger daughter, Miss Lucy, to the Masters School, where she is a sophomore. She also visited another daughter, Miss Nancy Lewis, who is enrolled at Vassar College.

Miss Sara Ann Tarrant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Tarrant, 712 Radcliff avenue, University City, will honor a group of debutante friends at a luncheon at Bellevue Country Club. The date for her party is tentatively scheduled as Jan. 3.

Mrs. William E. Smith of Tucson, Ariz., will arrive tomorrow for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Ernest A. Green, 7340 Northmoor drive. Mrs. Smith will be among the out-of-town guests attending the Velled Prophet ball Wednesday night.

Visiting in New York.

MRS. FRANK J. V. KREBS, 9365 Clayton road, departed Friday for New York to spend a week with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Norcross Jr., and their two young daughters, Mimi and Kitty Norcross.

Mrs. Krebs's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis, will have as their guests this week Mrs. Lewis's mother, Mrs. Robert Mason Hamilton, a former St. Louisan, who, with Mr. Hamilton, has been living in Columbus, O., since last June. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and their baby daughter, Emily Allison Lewis, make their home at 7449 Hiawatha avenue, Richmond Heights.

Miss Mary Carolyn Rasseur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Rasseur, 7230 Maryland avenue, will fly home tomorrow from Vassar College to be a maid of honor at the Velled Prophet ball Wednesday night, and will return to college Friday.

PLEA ON MORALS IN ARMED FORCES

United Lutherans Expected to Consider Request to Truman.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7 (AP)—A plea for presidential action to "bring moral conditions within the armed forces closer to the Christian moral standards" of the national convention of the United Lutheran Church in America today.

A resolution to this effect was adopted by the church's New York synod last June. That synod has referred the resolution to the convention's committee on memorials from constituent synods for action by the church's general body.

The resolution asserted the Christian moral standards accepted by the nation "has not been attained or even approached within the armed forces," and memorialized the United Lutheran Church of America to petition the President for necessary action.

Benevolence gifts to the church have increased from $1,900,000 in 1945 to an anticipated minimum of $2,200,000 this year, Dr. Clarence C. Stoughton of Clifton, Staten Island, the church's stewardship secretary, reported.

Dr. Sylvester C. Michels, executive director of the Lutheran world federation and director of Lutheran relief activities in Europe, reported the church was getting relief material into the Russian zone.

Mrs. Herbert Bechtold of Chicago, a youthful appearing grandmother, today became the first woman delegate in the history of biennial conventions.

J. B. TOGETHOFF SR. FUNERAL; WAS BRENTWOOD ALDERMAN

Funeral services for Joseph B. Togethoffs Sr., former member of the Board of Aldermen of Brentwood and Justice of the Peace there for several years until 1934, will be at 9 a.m. Wednesday from the Bopp undertaking establishment, 12 North Hanley road, Clayton, to St. Mary Magdalene Roman Catholic Church, 8757 Manchester boulevard, Brentwood. Burial will be in St. Peter's cemetery.

Mr. Togethoffs, who was 54 years old, died yesterday of acute asthma at St. Mary's Hospital. He was a member of a contracting firm founded by his father, the late Frank Togethoffs, for 30 years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Susan W. Togethoffs, 8750 Euclid avenue, Brentwood; his mother, Mrs. Cecelia R. Togethoffs; three sons, a daughter, six brothers and four sisters.

MRS. J. P. PHELAN FUNERAL; MOTHER OF BANK OFFICER

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Towner Phelan, who died early yesterday of a cerebral hemorrhage at her apartment at 412 Union boulevard, were held today at the Wagoner undertaking establishment, 4161 Lindell boulevard. Burial was in Bellefontaine cemetery. Mrs. Phelan, who was 75 years old, had been ill for several months.

She was the widow of J. P. Phelan, general agent of the St. Louis office of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States at the time of his death in 1910. She is survived by two sons, Towner Phelan, a vice president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., and Val Phelan of New York; a daughter, Miss Janet Phelan of the Union boulevard address.

Mr. Oliver Marries Again, LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 7 (AP)—Vic Oliver, 48-year-old stage and radio comedian, and former son-in-law of Winston Churchill, married Natalie Frances Conder, 25, in London today. His marriage to Sarah Churchill was dissolved a year ago.

WINDSOR'S RETURN TO POSE DELICATE SOCIAL PROBLEM

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—With the Duke and Duchess of Windsor returning to England Friday for "a good stay," Mayfair is looking to King George VI for solution of one of its most delicate social problems in years.

Except for a brief stop-over last year, it will be the American-born Duchess' first visit to her husband's country since shortly after he gave up the throne nine years ago to marry her.

The question British society leaders are pondering is: "How shall we behave toward her?" If the King receives his sister-in-law, she is likely to be accepted everywhere. If the King does not invite the Duchess, no one can yet say how she will be treated in her husband's old circles.

By selling their home on the French Riviera, the Windsors inspired a fresh crop of rumors that the Duke might be entering the service of the Labor Government. Whitehall officials have declined comment.

King George returned to London today from Balmoral Castle, Queen Elizabeth and the two princesses remained in Scotland.

NEHRU URGES QUICK REMOVAL OF BRITISH TROOPS FROM INDIA

NEW DELHI, Oct. 7 (AP)—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru said yesterday that the Congress party wants British troops withdrawn from India "with the greatest possible speed."

His statement was in reply to suggestions by speakers at a British Conservative party conference in Blackpool, England, that British troops were in danger of being used as mercenaries to suppress the Congress party rule in India.

Although he did not mention by name Winston Churchill, whose Blackpool speech protesting against Britain's "voluntary abdication" of India was published widely in India, Nehru said, "There will be no co-operation with those who adopt an unfriendly attitude toward us or trifle with the independence of India."

DR. W. H. HEMKER FUNERAL

Funeral services for Dr. William H. Hemker, physician at Pacific for more than 20 years, were held today from the Thibbes undertaking establishment, Pacific. He was 65 years old and died yesterday of a heart ailment at his home in Pacific.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mayme Hemker; his mother, Mrs. George Hemker, two sisters and a brother. He was buried in the Pacific cemetery.

BACK TO IRELAND TO REST AT 90

RINEANNA, Eire, Oct. 7 (AP)—Patrick Flood, 90 years old, a former New York blacksmith, returned by plane Saturday to his native Ireland "to spend the rest of his days."

Flood said he "did all right" during his residence in the United States, but added: "After 69 years in America I need a rest."

AUDIENCE RESPONSIVE TO POE-ESQUE 'BELLS'

Ballet Russe Presentation Executed With Spirit and Precision.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo concluded its St. Louis engagement in Kiel Auditorium last night with a program that offered as its chief novelty a ballet derived from Edgar Allan Poe's famous poem, "The Bells."

The handsomely mounted production undertook to describe a "cycle of life from happiness to obliteration," but the unprompted observer would have been justified in reading any one of a hundred meanings into it.

No definite line of thought was in evidence and there was no visible progression from one mood to another. The choreography by Ruth Page was angular and lauded; the music by Darius

U.S. SPY SERVICE OUTLINED FOR HOUSE

Military Committee Particularly Interested in Foreign Atomic Developments.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—An effort to broaden American intelligence activities to permit actual spying abroad shaped up today in the House Military Committee. Keeping close check on foreign atomic energy developments would be one specific assignment of the contemplated espionage corps.

Details of the proposal still are being drafted, but a bipartisan group within the committee intends to sponsor some such plan, spokesmen told a reporter.

Congress never has authorized actual spying by American intelligence officers. They are limited now to operational duty directly in support of military forces and to counter-espionage—blocking any moves by foreign spies.

Under the new program, intelligence units would function, including the National Intelligence Authority or a similar body, probably would be retained but given greater authority.

The Army, Navy and other departments would maintain intelligence activities, but would clear plans and information through a central group, much as is done now. The National Intelligence Authority is composed of the Secretaries of State, War and Navy and Admiral William D. Leahy, representing President Truman. It has an operating group headed by Lt. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg to carry out its policies.

Disclosure of the plan to broaden the system follows a special report by H. Ralph Burton, general counsel for the committee, urging "an alert and enlightened international intelligence."

Burton declined to discuss what action the committee might take. He said only that his staff has been conducting a study of American intelligence for nearly six months and would report to the committee later in detail.

COMMUNISM HAS GIVEN FOOD, JOBS TO ALL IN YENAN

chinery has kept it in a medieval state. Two factories which I saw—a rug plant and a spinning mill—looked like something out of the eighteenth century.

It is pretty evident that the Communist-controlled administration has won the support of the majority of the population in this area. The form of government is certainly not democracy as Americans know it, but in its lower and middle levels, at least, it appears to have a high democratic content.

The system can best be described as a benevolent kind of one-party rule—benevolent, that is, to peasants, workers and small shopkeepers, who make up the vast majority of the population of this isolated region.

The controlling Communist party, which has about 33 percent representation in the government, is responsive to popular demands for economic and governmental changes, as expressed through the numerous neighborhood, peasant and workers' associations, as long as these demands do not conflict with the overall party policy. Even in matters of higher policy the party has little difficulty with the pliable and semi-literate population, whose chief concern is to make a good living. In the absence of any organized political opposition, subtle propaganda and "guidance" of ubiquitous party workers has a clear field.

Continuous Education.
The Communists have been smart enough not to incur popular hostility by pushing reforms down people's throats. The campaign against superstition and old-fashioned practices has been carried out by a process of continuous education.

The attack on illiteracy, for instance, was slowed up and modified when it ran into opposition from peasants who objected to sending their children to school when they were needed for work at home. Little by little, however, the literacy rate is increasing, though the majority of people here are still unable to read and write.

The key to the success of the Communists' "new democracy" program lies first in their economic reforms and, secondly, in the good relationship established between the government and army, on the one hand, and the people, on the other. The Kuomintang (Nationalist) party could learn much from this and other aspects of the Communist program, many features of which could be put into effect in Kuomintang territory without radical dislocation of the existing governmental system. The challenge is tremendous.

RED COUNTERATTACK THROWS BACK ONE DRIVE ON KALGAN
PEIPING, Oct. 7 (UP)—A Communist counterattack has driven back Nationalist troops battling toward the Communist stronghold at Kalgan, official reports said today.

The fight occurred at Hwallin, 55 miles southeast of Kalgan. One column of a three-pronged Nationalist attack had entered the town, but was forced to retreat to positions held early last week.

Forced Conversions Charge In Yugoslavia Denied by Pope

Holy See nor the Catholic episcopate in Croatia had any part in it. The Vatican replied that the principle of the church was that "conversion must be the result not of exterior constraint but of the soul adhering to the truths taught by the Catholic Church."

A special episcopal committee was set up "precisely to achieve that the conversions be, in conformity with Catholic doctrine, the fruit of persuasion and not of constraint," the aide memoire continued.

Earlier in his address, Pope Pius criticized sharply what he described as a trend toward "a doctrine which, excluding all idea of the supernatural and of revelation, attributes to human reason the power of understanding the world completely, the prerogative of dominating all life, and which consequently demands... the full independence of man by all bonds of authority."

With apparent reference to Yugoslavia and other countries in the Balkan sphere of influence, he said: "Of this doctrine, we know the fountains, the followers, the progress; we know its influence on intellectual, moral and social life, on economy and on politics, as well as its vicissitudes in the course of the history of the last centuries, especially the last hundred years."

Oppression of Catholics.
The representative appeal to the principle of the "liberty of conscience" and to the principle of "tolerance" in matters concerning spiritual, especially religious life. "Yet all too often those very ones having barely achieved victory, find nothing more urgent to do than to violate conscience and impose on the Catholic part of the people an oppressive yoke, especially in that which refers to the rights of parents in the education of their children."

He warned Catholics that they must abandon doctrines or beliefs which the church had examined and found in error, and said that their freedom of thought and conscience must be limited by the revealed truth of the church.

"Liberty of thought and the freedom of conscience have their essential limits in the truthfulness of the God they reveal," he said. Turning to marriage and divorce, one of the matters reserved to the Rota tribunal—the Pope asserted again that civilian courts had no right to terminate Catholic church marriages.

Sacredness of Marriage Tie.
"Even among the non-baptized (non-Catholics), marriages legitimately contracted are in the natural order a sacred thing, so that the civil tribunals do not have the power to dissolve them..." He said, however, that the church would recognize, "in determined circumstances," civil annulment.

The Pope said that while canon law recognizes the competence of civil courts "for the purely civil effects of marriage even between the baptized, much more ample and profound is the competence of the church in matrimonial questions."

Both world wars—"but incomparably more the second"—have swelled the tide of broken marriages, he said, as millions of husbands and wives have endured long separations.

"None will doubt that one of the chief cares of the church at the present time must be that of restraining with every means the growing decadence of matrimony and family; and it (the church) is fully conscious of this, well knowing, however, that its zeal cannot obtain effective results except as general economic, social and especially moral conditions make less difficult the leading of the conjugal life acceptable to the Lord," he said.

"In this regard, very great are the responsibilities that weigh on the public powers."

AIR LINES OVER ARCTIC FEASIBLE, B-29 MAN SAYS

cer Jones, British astronomer, reported that the observations of the Dreamboat strongly supported his theory that the north magnetic pole is about 200 miles north of the commonly accepted position. He had based his calculations on data compiled by the Royal Air Force Lancaster Aries which flew over the North Pole in May 1945.

Landing at Cairo.
Shortly before the Dreamboat was sighted over Cairo, Irvine radioed, "I declare emergency." He expressed fear the low fuel supply would "unbalance the ship and landing would be dangerous. The 400 gallons remaining were barely enough to 'wet the bottom' of our 36 cells holding 13,000 gallons when fuel was explained."

However, the plane touched down safely and the crewmen, tired from lack of sleep, stepped out to a welcome from the Royal Aero Club of Egypt. They talked with reporters and then headed for Shepheard's Hotel.

EXCOMMUNICATION OF TITO FOR TRYING BISHOP REPORTED

Church Law Forbids Civilian Judgment of Primate Without Permission.

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 7 (UP)—A reliable Vatican authority on Catholic church law said today that Marshal Josp (Tito) Broz had incurred a "minor excommunication" by placing Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac on trial without Vatican authorization.

The source explained that the Tito excommunication was "automatic" because he had violated church laws.

"According to church law, members of the clergy and especially bishops are excommunicated from judgment of any kind in civilian tribunals unless the Vatican grants permission that they be placed on trial," the source explained. "This was not the case of the primate of Croatia, Stepinac, who was arbitrarily arrested and placed on trial at Zagreb."

There are two kinds of excommunication, it was explained. Major excommunication is issued by means of a special decree of the pope and the Catholic church. It is the one which Napoleon incurred when he arrested Pope Pius VI.

Minor excommunication is not decreed by the Vatican but is incurred by any Catholic who deliberately violates church law. Tito is known to be a Catholic, but reportedly a non-practicing one.

For the time being he is no longer considered a member of the Catholic church, will not be granted the holy sacraments and is banned from all church functions," the Vatican source said.

Former King Victor Emmanuel I incurred a similar excommunication when he ended the temporal power of the Pope by occupying Rome in 1870. It was recalled, however, that when the King died in 1915, he was granted "extreme unction" by a military chaplain through special Vatican permission.

TOWN OF 5100 'GUINEA PIG' IN DIABETES TESTS

OXFORD, Mass., Oct. 7 (AP)—The entire population of this small industrial town—5100 men, women and children—today became "guinea pigs" in a four-month experiment to check the spread of diabetes.

Officials of the United States Public Health Service, in charge of the survey, said it was the first time in the world a whole community would be tested for diabetic symptoms.

Lining up today were the town's 1000 high school pupils, ready to submit blood and urine specimens that physicians and laboratory technicians will examine for abnormal sugar concentration.

Reports on specimens will be ready in two days, "so that abnormal findings may be referred to private physicians for quick treatment," Dr. Hugh L. C. Wilkerson of the Public Health Service's new diabetes office in Boston said.

Business Outlook

lated into active demand. That means we must keep high levels of employment, at good wages, for only in that way can we maintain purchasing power and mass markets. Our long-run problem will be one of keeping and developing markets for agriculture and business.

This was foreseen by the Congress last year, when it passed the Employment Act of 1946 creating the Economic Council to help the President study such problems as this one. When the President makes his report on the state of the nation next January, he will have had the benefit of the advice of the three-man Economic Council, Messrs. Nourse, Clark and Keyserling, on the nation's long-range economic problems and aims.

For the immediate future, however, our problem is inflation, not deflation. If we—and that means all of us—don't observe elementary rules of regard for the rights of others in our individual and business dealings during the next few months, prices can and will get out of hand. Charging all that the traffic will bear for goods not under price control; making unreasonable wage demands; disregarding ceiling prices; buying on the black market; hoarding of materials, parts, or finished goods—doing all those things would mean one thing: spiralling prices, a collapse of consumer demand, and depression.

I am confident that American business men, labor, and consumers are adult enough not to let momentary impatience, or short-sighted selfishness, trick them into letting slip the opportunity for stable, long-continued prosperity that is almost in our grasp.

SAFETY COUNCIL WINS AWARD

The Greater St. Louis Safety Council has received an award from the National Safety Council for conducting the best woman driver training school project, it was announced yesterday.

Announcement of the award was made on the eve of the opening today in Chicago of the thirty-fourth national safety congress.

Military Training Plan Farley

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—President Truman today discussed with Secretary Patterson the War Department's revised universal military training proposal. The Army proposal would require that recruits train for six months and take the equivalent of another six months by alternate means such as Reserve or National Guard Service.

JAIL TERM FOR AUTO SALE ABOVE CEILING

30 Days and $500 Fine for Salesman—First Such Sentence Here.

The first jail sentence in St. Louis for black market sale of an automobile was assessed today against Roy Drier, a salesman, 5462 Nottingham avenue, on his plea of guilty of selling a used machine at $210 above the ceiling fixed by the Office of Price Administration. United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen sentenced Drier to 30 days in jail and fined him $500.

Drier, while employed by the McDaniell Motor Co., 7335 Ivory avenue, in March 1945, sold a 1941 De Soto sedan to Addis R. Collier, Lemay Ferry and Baumgartner roads, St. Louis county, for $1650. Ceiling price was $1440, it was testified by OPA agents.

OPA officials said Collier had made a cash payment to Drier, representing the over-ceiling differential, and that a certificate had been filed with the OPA, falsely representing that the ceiling had not been exceeded.

Drier's attorney, in a plea for leniency, told the court his client had not profited personally from the sale and that the company had refunded Collier $250, plus $150 attorney fee. Maximum penalty for the violation is a year in jail and $10,000 fine.

The OPA office said a criminal information is pending in district court against Earl LaCroix, a partner in the McDaniell firm, charging a similar over-ceiling violation. In June 1944 LaCroix and John B. McDaniell, his partner, were charged in a civil suit with black market sales of automobiles. The following December a permanent injunction was issued in district court against the partners, and $1000 damages assessed.

Glorious Coloring

Suggested Tours For Autumn Beauty

By Leonard Hall

THERE are some folks who claim that you must go to New England to really see the beauties of autumn—but as I have stated before, I am from Missouri and you'll have to show me. It is true that the hardwoods in the mountain country of New Hampshire and Vermont—the sugar maples, beeches and other trees which give that country its glorious autumn coloring—are very beautiful. Yet here in our own state we have a much richer forest covering; perhaps the greatest variety of trees which exists anywhere in America.

For Missouri is the meeting place of north and south, east and west. We have the hard maples—and lots of them. But we have many other trees equally beautiful in their autumn foliage—the elms, hickories, sassafras, persimmon, hawthorn, blackhaw and a great variety of oaks. Contrasting with these on the Missouri hills are the dark greens of red cedars and the more brilliant green of the pine, which is beginning to come back in some areas.

THERE ISN'T MUCH doubt that Missouri's autumn is early this year. Today as we drove down to the new farm, it was plain to see all along the way that the foliage was beginning to turn. Sumac and sassafras along the edges of the fields range from bright yellow through all the shades of scarlet and on to dark red. The dogwood at the edge of the timber is literally blooming for the second time as its foliage is painted by the hand of that master artist, Mother Nature. Many of the hickories have passed their peak of brilliant yellow and are beginning to change to brown, while hard maples are showing color at the tips which one frosty night will turn to scarlet.

SEEING THE OZARK country at its autumn best is a matter of careful timing, and I believe that the peak is going to be reached this year at least a week earlier than usual. This is a thing which should be taken into consideration in planning that autumn pilgrimage into the hill country, which has become an annual event for so many Missourians; and certainly anyone who hasn't made this pilgrimage is missing a great treat as nature can provide. It seems to me we should plan such a trip for the weekend of the twelfth or nineteenth at the very latest. After that, the peak of color will be gone, and there will remain primarily the somber reds of the oak trees.

IT ISN'T DIFFICULT to take such a trip from St. Louis, since it can easily be varied in length from a half day to two days or more. Because of this and because some of the highways leading out of our city offer a better display than others, it might be interesting to suggest several alternative routes which can be taken. For a short drive of even a half day, there is much of beauty that can be seen. One might drive south on Highway 61-67 to Pevoley, turn right on County A to Hillsboro, then home up No. 21—or at Hillsboro one can turn south a mile or so to the road which runs over to Morse's Mill and Cedar Hill, then home via Gravois road, which is U.S. 30.

FOR A FULL DAY'S trip, you may want to drive south down No. 21 through Hillsboro and De Soto, past Washington State Park, which is a beautiful spot for a picnic lunch, turn down through the sleepy valley where lies the village of Old Mines and so to Potosi. At this point, Highway 8 swings to the right around the court house and runs some 40 miles west to Steelville, crossing Courtois and Housah creeks. From Steelville, you can drive north on Highway 19 to Cuba, then east on No. 66 to St. Clair, where Highway 30 branches off to the right. I would suggest leaving No. 66 at this point, since No. 30 comes into St. Louis through beautiful rolling country, which offers magnificent prospects on every side.

FOR A TWO-DAY JAUNT, one might continue down past Potosi on No. 21. At Ironton you can stop for lunch at Mrs. Albright's new Greystone Inn or drive on down to the Lone Pine Hotel. Indeed, this is a pleasant place to spend the night, although you will probably want to push on south, deeper into the Ozark country. There are hotels at Ellington and Van Buren which can take good care of the traveler. If it might be well to make reservations at these. Or you can turn aside at Ellington on Highway 104 and drive out to Current river, where you can put up with Bill Smith, who runs the ferry at Powder Mill. For a special treat you may want to have Bill drop you down in his motorboat to see beautiful Blue Spring, which is magnificent at this time of year.

THERE ARE MANY POINTS, of interest in this territory—Big Spring at Van Buren, which is reached by a spectacular four-mile drive from that town; Blue Spring, which is a couple of miles below Powder Mill ferry, and Alley Spring, just six miles out of Eminence. If you are in Eminence around meal time, you can be sure of a good meal at the Powell Hotel. Also, if you make this particular trip, you can put up comfortably at Round Spring Tavern, on Highway 19, a few miles north of Eminence. This few miles of road, by the way, is as spectacular as anything in the Ozarks. You would then drive back to St. Louis by way of Highway 19 to Rölla or Cuba, then on No. 66 to St. Clair and back to St. Louis on either No. 66, Manchester road or Gravois.

THERE ARE, OF COURSE, many other jaunts which can be made into the Ozark country—and you may have your favorite trip already lined up. But if you haven't, you can make any of the drives which are suggested here and be absolutely certain of seeing Missouri's autumn at its best. The main thing to do is to watch the weather carefully—and looking over across our valley at the distant hills today, it seems to me that the weekend of the twelfth will probably find our autumn coloring at its peak of perfection.

THRILLS, CHEERS IN BASEBALL'S BIGGEST SHOW

Sharing the thrills with a full house that witnessed the world series opener yesterday afternoon, Miss Betty Thiel (left), Collinsville, and Miss Norma Ring, East St. Louis—ardent Redbird rooters—cheer Stan Musial's double in the sixth that tied up the game 1-1.

A view of part of the capacity crowd that turned out for the second world series game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Red Sox at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. The Redbirds won 3 to 0, evening the series.

A moment of suspense for the Cardinal fans—one of many in the 10-inning contest.

Good news! But it wasn't quite good enough. With two out, the Cards forged ahead in the eighth; then the Red Sox tied the score in the ninth and won 3-2 on Rudy York's homer in the tenth.

Two members of the Truman cabinet were among notables at the first game. From left: Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, St. Louis; Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson; James P. Finnegan, St. Louis, collector of internal revenue, and Frank and George Wallace, brothers of Mrs. Truman, wife of the President.

Movie actors Gabby Hayes (left) and Joe E. Brown (right) put on an impromptu act for A. B. (Happy) Chandler, baseball commissioner, who tossed out the first ball of the series. Mrs. J. G. Taylor Spink is of left.

Cardinal fans in the bleachers, in holiday mood at the start of today's game. The long wait in ticket lines and crowded stands was forgotten by the shirt-sleeved rooters as action began.

Grandstand railbirds following the game from a precarious perch. View is from main ramp, back of the stand.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM a girl of 17 engaged to a soldier 18. His home is in another city. At present he is stationed in Germany. He is the only child so of course his mother loves him very much. One day I received a letter from her and we have been corresponding ever since. We have never met.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

like that when she has never met me, and she shouldn't be writing me at all. She is always saying something hateful about her though she has no way of knowing anything about her since she has never met her either. Must I stop writing my fiancé's mother or shall I keep right on and pay no attention to the way my own mother talks? DISGUSTED.

Possibly your mother is irritated because your boy friend's mother is taking your friendship with him so seriously, when you are both still so young. At 17 you are really rushing matters to be considering marriage when you are too immature to be ready to take on such responsibilities. Your mother's anxiety regarding your welfare and her dread that you will do something foolish is perhaps making her say and do things which are apt only to make you more determined on your course. It seems to me it would be wise for you to break this engagement. Explain to the boy and his mother that you are doing so because you think, and your mother agrees, that you are too young to be considering it. Suggest that you both be free to date others and that on his return you can renew your friendship and see how you feel about the matter then. If you and the boy's mother have developed an affection for each other through your letters, I see no reason why they should not continue.

Dear Martha Carr:

ONE OF MY SONS married while he was in the service. He married an out of town girl and has now brought her to our town to live. I like her very much and would do anything in the world for her. I happen to know for a fact that she has a child back home, but neither she nor my son has mentioned this to me. It would not make any change in my feelings toward her if she would tell me this, knowing it hasn't made me like her any the less. Do you think they should tell me? Should I mention it? C.L.D.

If your son and his wife choose to tell this fact to anyone, that is up to them. But otherwise even you should not mention it. It is quite possible that this girl has wanted to leave her entire past behind and make a new beginning in a new town. She may have left the child in good hands and be devoted to it, but have thought it best not to bring it into her new home. They are really not obligated to tell you about this, though of course they may in time.

CASE RECORDS

By Dr. George W. Crane

CASE L-224: Harry R., aged 26, is a young psychology instructor. "It seems alarming that so many people are becoming neurotic," he soliloquized while we were visiting. "Almost 2,000,000 men were rejected or discharged by the military service in trying to recruit 12,000,000. That's a very high incidence of maladjustment. What can we do to combat it, Dr. Crane?"

WHEN I LAUNCHED this column 10 years ago, it was my hope that I could vaccinate people in advance against personality upsets and later insanity. Prophylaxis is our best method, just as it has done more in the field of organic medicine than has surgery or the sulfa drugs. We eliminate diphtheria, smallpox, whooping cough, typhoid, tetanus and several other dire killers by vaccinating children early. Another progressive step would be to encourage thinking. It seems a bad habit of most people to think negatively. "I can't do this! I can't hold my husband's or wife's undying devotion!" Such comments reach me by the thousands in the mail. We need to start thinking "I can!" Instead of dwelling upon our aches and pains, we should think about our health and other assets.

WHEN MOSES SENT the 12 spies to investigate the Promised Land, they came back with glowing accounts of the fertility of the new region. "It flows with milk and honey," was their verdict, according to the Old Testament account. "But we can't conquer the inhabitants and take the land," said 10 of the 12, who were members of the world wide society of I Can'ters. "Why, there are giants in the land. We are as grasshoppers compared to them." But Caleb urged them to advance into the new land. Outvoted by the great majority of fearful, negative thinkers, he had to wander around for 40 years in the wilderness, until the I Can'ters died off. Then came the time to allocate the regions in the Promised Land. Caleb was given first choice because of his positive stand 40 years earlier.

PERHAPS CALEB and Joshua discussed their strategy the night before. They knew that while the older generation of I Can'ters had died off, the children of these negative thinkers might still be fearful. So Caleb boldly asked for the land inhabited by the Giants! He tried to show his fellowmen his disdain for fear, since he didn't want to wander around in the wilderness another 40 years. Millions of Americans are brooding and in ill health because they are trying to find symptoms of ill health! They seem almost obsessed with the will to fall. Reverse this negative type of thinking. Be positive and courageous. If you waver for a moment, talk yourself back into a brave, winning outlook. You can be a failure or a success depending on your point of view, so build yourself a winning morale and taste the fruits of a successful tour of this world during the 70 years allotted here. Don't indulge in self pity because you haven't shoes. Think of the returning veterans who haven't feet!

Relief for Migraine Headache

By Herman N. Bundesen, M.D.

WE DO not know what causes migraine, the one-sided headache which is so severe that some have referred to it as the "granddaddy of all headaches." There is, however, a theory that the attacks, which are periodic, come on because of release into the blood of a substance known as histamine. This, in turn, is thought to occur as the result of some hidden allergy. Doctors conjecture that people who have migraine headaches may be hypersensitive to some substance, such as food or pollen or dust.

WHATEVER the substance may be, the theory is that when these people come in contact with it, they react to it by a release of histamine into the blood. Histamine is ordinarily present in the cells of the body, but only a very tiny bit indeed is normally present in the blood stream. Some people seem unable to tolerate any larger amount of this substance in the circulation and they are the ones who are believed to develop migraine when histamine enters the blood.

Because of these considerations, Dr. Stuyvesant Butler and Dr. William A. Thomas of Chicago treated a number of patients with migraine by giving them injections of histamine in gradually increasing doses. Thirty-four patients were included in the study. The histamine was dissolved in a salt solution and injected very slowly into a vein, about five drops per minute.

THE ENTIRE injection usually took from four to eight hours. As many as three or four treatments were given with a day of rest between injections. The preparation was not used in patients with heart disease, high blood pressure or kidney disease, nor was it used in patients who had ulcer of the stomach or bowel.

Of the 34 patients, seven were greatly improved and 24 became completely free of their symptoms. In the other three, no improvement occurred. All of the patients were observed for at least six months after the treatment was employed.

Of course, treatment of this type must be carefully carried out, since certain reactions may occur such as a severe headache, an attack of hives or even, asthma. On the other hand, the results obtained seem so good that many patients with migraine might find it well worth employing, particularly where the usual treatment with drugs fails to bring relief.

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

A FABLE that always gave me a chuckle concerned the Persian emperor who spied an old man planting a walnut tree. He drew rein to ask him his age. "I am four," the peasant said. When the emperor frowned, he added, "I do not speak in jest for the wise do not reckon the time they have squandered in folly. I consider my real age only the time I have spent serving my emperor."

The emperor, impressed, pointed out, "By your reckoning, you will never see those trees you are planting come to perfection." "True," agreed the sage, "but since others have planted that we may eat, it is only fair that we should plant for those who follow us."

"Excellent," pronounced the emperor and tossed him a purse of gold. The old man bowed low and said, "Oh, King, other men's trees take 40 years to come to perfection but mine have produced fruit as soon as they were planted."

"Bravo," said the monarch and tossed another purse. "Ah," cried the old man. "The trees of others bear fruit only once a year but mine have yielded two crops in ten minutes."

"Delightful," breathed the emperor, turning over a third purse. Then he whispered to his party. "Let's get out of here or this witty old fellow will break the royal exchequer."

Sprinkle sliced peaches with lemon juice or place in syrup immediately after peeling to prevent darkening.

He Made a Business of His Own

His Father-in-Law's Prize-Winning Idea Gave This Ex-GI Independence

By Clarissa Start

ONE of the dreams of the returning serviceman, weary of regimentation, of order giving and order taking, was to start a business of his own, however small, where he could begin celebrating his civilian independence. Among the ex-servicemen who bought that dream was Earl E. Woodard, 7388 Arlington avenue, Richmond Heights, who not only started his own rug, carpet, and furniture cleaning business, but is now training other veterans to start similar businesses.

Earl's career in business really began when his father-in-law, Robert M. Burklin, of Chevy Chase, Md., entered the Readers' Digest contest, "Ideas for New Business," in June, 1945. Burklin, who had had a cleaning plant before the war, suggested that veterans should start their own in-home rug, carpet, and sofa shampooing service, and for a small outlay of capital, could literally begin cleaning up. His letter was awarded one of the first prizes of $250, and also brought him hundreds of letters from interested servicemen, among them his son-in-law.

"I was one of the veterans he started in business and I now represent him in this area," Woodard explained. "Since then we've started 15 others in business and have a waiting list of 50. Eventually we expect to have about 250 throughout the country."

Woodard, a former navigator with the Eighth Air Force in England, was shot down in a bombing mission over Nancy, France, managed to make his way to Spain through the Pyrenees, and was the last American to escape before the invasion. His assistant in the rug cleaning business, Tom O'Neill, 5949 Wabasha avenue, is also an Air Force veteran, a former Tech. Sergeant, who spent two years in England. Working with a rug scrubber and a vacuum cleaner, he is slightly different, he observed, from working on a B-17, but also easier on the nerves. Woodard has two other trainees doing part time work now to learn the business, one formerly in the Engineering Corps, the other an ex-Air Force captain, and one of his graduates, Pierce Raney, 5431 Cabanne avenue, is now a business for himself.

Raney is a veteran of World War I, since applications have not been limited to ex-servicemen from the last war only. "Among the men who are in business in other towns," Woodard said, "is one in Philadelphia, one on Long Island, one in Boston, one in Daytona Beach, Florida, and my father-in-law has trained five or six in Washington, D. C. They're really his competitors now but he says there's enough business for all of them. There's also a man in Vancouver, Canada and on our waiting list there's a fellow who wants to go into business in Shanghai. China. He's a Chinese-American citizen who was in the Air Corps, too. just how we're going to train him because I don't think a correspondence course would be very practical."

Prospective rug and furniture cleaners have been held back slightly by the scarcity of machinery and equipment, to date, though as Burklin's Readers' Digest entry pointed out, not much equipment is needed. The main items are a rug scrubbing machine which includes a soap solution tank and a whirl feed brush, and a large commercial vacuum cleaner.

"We have two or three smaller types of machines, too," Woodard added, "and of course you need a truck or trailer of some kind to move the machinery. Including the cost of a truck, it involves a couple of thousand dollars capital to go into business."

While they have no organized association, the Burklin trainees have a sort of mutual assistance program in recommending each other to customers in other cities. One of Woodard's first customers, for example, was a woman whose daughter lived in another city and had been so pleased with her local cleaner that she asked him to recommend someone in St. Louis, a recommendation which led to a two-day job in a large West End home here.

"Most of our customers have come to us from word of mouth advertising," Woodard says. "Our work has wonderful sales value in that we go directly to the house and there's not all the bother and confusion of sending the rugs away to be cleaned and having the house torn up over a period of days or weeks. We've even gone into homes where the owner was on vacation and done the work while they were away."

Woodard doesn't consider that he's in competition with commercial cleaners who work on a volume basis and find it unprofitable to make house calls but he has gotten some large jobs from hotels, schools, stores, where it is impossible to take up rugs and carpets and send them out for cleaning.

"I did all the carpeting at Lindenwood College this summer," he said, "and expect to do a downtown store this fall. Department stores always have dirty rugs," he added, a gleam of anticipation in his eye.

Some of Woodard's trainees and men on the waiting list have applied for on-the-job training pay while learning the business of rug cleaning. Burklin estimated in his Readers' Digest entry, and Woodard agrees, that a young man in business for himself will earn up to $50 a week. An average of six weeks time is spent in training new men though, as Woodard points out, it varies with the individual.

"There's a lot of work to it," he said, "The fellows who go into business for themselves can't be concerned about a 40-hour week, and when Tom and I finish for the day we hardly ever feel much like going out and playing tennis. I go out on all the jobs myself because by going out I make more contacts and also I see that the work is done right and if it isn't done right it's my own fault. My wife and another girl take care of the office—this is the office," he indicated the living room of their second floor apartment. "Since my wife has to stay at home anyway to take care of our five-month-old son it works out fine."

In time, Woodard hopes to expand his business to include such kindred services as cleaning and polishing floors, cleaning walls, possibly moth-proofing upholstered furniture and blankets. His enthusiasm engendered by his own business is obvious.

"I used to be an income tax agent," he says, "but it was confining indoor work and I didn't like it. Besides that, I'm a lot more popular with the general public than I ever was in the income tax department."

nationalities. I am constantly amazed at the way in which the characteristics of each country are emphasized. The French, for all their sprightliness and sophistication, possess a direct, cutting manner of wording ideas. Do not rest what they say unless you want to see yourself and the rest of humanity in the clear and unflattering light.

A meringue instead of a pastry top blends well with fruit pies. It may cover the fruit entirely or it may just form a crown around the edge. A crumble topping made with three tablespoons of flour, three tablespoons of sugar and one or two tablespoons of melted butter or margarine rubbed in with the fingertips makes a delicious topping for one-crust pies.

Ribbons, sewed to the corners of quilts, can be tied to bed posts for firmer anchorage.

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

SOUTH in today's deal felt that he had been roughly handled by Fate, and in a sense, he was right. Better play on his part, however, would have taken the matter out of Fate's hands. South, dealer.

North-South might have reached the six-club contract more "scientifically," but that was unimportant, the only thing that counted was that they did reach it and that it was a sound contract.

West opened the spade queen. The ace was put up and declarer led the club three to his own queen. He was not greatly disturbed when West smothered this with the king, but the bad news came almost immediately that another trump loser was unavoidable. Whereupon South apostrophized Fate, as mentioned previously.

Granting that it was bad luck to lose one trick to the singleton club king and another to the 10-9-8 combination remaining in East's hand, it is nevertheless true that it would have cost nothing to guard against this very possibility. Let's take a look at South's trump holding in conjunction with the J-3 in dummy.

Under any circumstances South would have to lose at least one trump trick, missing as he was the K-30 9-8-7 of the suit. What was worse, he would have to lose two trump tricks if either defender had started with the king and three others. If this was the case, however, there was nothing to be done about it, so the best plan was simply to forget it. Similarly, if clubs broke 3-2 any reasonable line of play would turn out all right, so South could forget about that also. The one position that required thought was the singleton king, and to guard against that, South should have led low from dummy and played the ace. If the king dropped the play would be vital; if it didn't, it would cost nothing.
